PLANS FOR ORGANISATION DOMINION'S RESOURCES

Details Understood To Have Been Drawn Up: Defence Needs Stressed

By Telegraph—Press Association.

WELLING'TON, June 2.

"All I ask is that the people of this country should realise that the Government is quite alive to its responsibilities and is doing its job in the very best way it can," said the Minister of Defence (the Hon. F. Jones) to a deputation from the Wellington branch of the New Zealand Defence League, which to-day urged upon the Government the need for maintaining adequate defence forces for the protection of New Zealand.

The deputation, which was received by the Prime Minister (the Rt. Hon. M. J. Savage) and Mr Jones, suggested that in the event of the volunteer system failing, a scheme of national service should be put into operation.

In presenting the case for the deputation the Hon. William Perry, M.L.C., said that where the League was disappointed and felt that the Government was also disappointed was in the failure of the volume of the case for the deputation of the deputation the Hon. William Perry, M.L.C., said that where the League was disappointed and felt that the Government had been working in full co-operation with Britain and other parts of the British Commonweight, and if they deputation the deputation the Hon. The Minister had said that the present strength of those forces was 7400, of whom only 41 per cent had attended camp this year and that another 1600 men were required to bring the forces up to full

The Defence League did not know what further efforts had since been made to obtain the extra 1600 men needed but the deputation had come to offer the Government the League's assistance in whatever way it might be required.

The League understood that there was in Parliament Buildings a man who had drawn up details for the organisation of the whole of the country's resources in a time of national resources in a time of national resources in a time of national need.

That was a very commendable scheme and the League felt that it should be put into operation and the public taken into the Government's confidence as far as was possible, so that they could take their part in the general scheme without confusion or delay if the need arose. If the League felt that training in the use of gas masks should also be given to the people, as was being done in Britain and that an inclustry for the manufacture of gas masks should be established in the asks should be established in the

of great value.

Mr Jones, replying, said the Government had not completed its plans for the defence forces of New Zealand. He thought the criticism of the land forces was not altogether fair. Their reorganisation had been undertaken last and could not be achieved in a few months. More attractive uniforms and conditions had been provided and it was along those lines that the Government was working. It was recognised that working. It was recognised that more of the artisan class were required in the territorial force. The Government had done its part in giving concessions to civil servants who underwent training and it need ed the assistance of employers as a

COMMITTEES WORKING

Many committees were also functioning in regard to national services in a time of emergency. "What has been done could not have been done without the full support of the Government and I received that support and support also of the heads of the three ser vices in creating what I think will be the most efficient force for the defence of New Zealand."

Mr Savage said that unless con ditions were humane and decent they could not expect young men to enlist. The private employer had to take his responsibility as well as the State, and the young man who enlisted should be made to feel that he had some stake in the country and some prospects. the country and some prospects.

Unemployment and enthusiasm said there were many men over the age limit for territorial service who would be only too willing to give their time to the creation of a special force and the League felt that if the Government created a citizens' militia force there would be a very large number of applicants.

The League would like to see the civilian population organised so that in the event of a national crisis it would be ready with as little control or the correction of the correction of the control of the control of the creation of a special force and the League felt that if the Government would specially the creation of the creation of the creation of the creation of a special force and the League felt that if the Government created a citizens' much to lose as the fighting men, and probably more and they should see that the young men were encouraged to enlist and not made to feel that their employment was prejudiced through absence on training. sponsibilities in that respect. The Government would guarantee that men were not going to suffer after their period of training.

He commented on the suggestion that a national register of all effec-tives in New Zealand should be com-piled and said that in the past that had been the foundation of conscription.

In regard to training in the use of gas masks it had been agreed by experts that while such training was very necessary in Britain there was no risk of any large-scale gas attack on New Zealand and that any attempt would be only spasmodic.

The Prime Minister, the Rt. Hon. M. J. Savage, told a Defence League deputation to-day that he remembered the time "when we had compulsion in New Zealand, but we only carried the thing half way.

"We conscripted men. While men were dying other people were getting rich. That is not going to happen again while this Government is in power. There is more to be done than conscripting men."

French, With Armoured Cars, Occupy Antioch: Action After "Ultimatum"

> United Press Association—Copyright. (Received June 2, 9 p.m.)

LONDON, June 2.

After what is described as Turkey's virtual ultimatum to France, threatening to march into the Sanjak of Alexandretta unless the French concede control of the territory, a Turkish Army Corps of 30,000 men assembled on the frontier and French troops with armoured cars occupied Antioch on Tuesday, says the "Daily Telegraph's" Antioch correspondent.

The Sanjak of Alexandretta was formed in 1925 by France, who controls Syria under mandate. There was a dispute with Turkey over boundaries, but the trouble was settled in 1929 by a treaty. In a subsequent agreement between France and Turkey last year, Turkey was given the lease of a large part of the port area at Alexandretta. The Sanjak was also given complete internal autonomy.

Huge Sum Said To Be Involved

United Press Association-Copyright. (Received June 2, 11.30 p.m.) NEW YORK, June 1.

Mr Thomas Dewey, New York District Attorney, has announced another spectacular attack on racketeering, with the indictment of six men, several of whom are lawyers of good standing.

They are accused of looting seven investment trusts of £2,000,000. The manner in which the ring is said to have operated is an almost unbelievable miracle of high finance. They started with £1 outlay, acquiring one share from the trusts. They then negotiated with the other ing one share from the trusts. They then negotiated with the other shareholders to obtain control of the latter's holdings. They thereupon withdrew millions of pounds in securities from the portfolios of the trusts by loan arrangements.

The securities were then sold, part of the proceeds being used to pay off the shareholders. The remainder was pocketed by the alleged conspirators, who thereafter returned to the portfolios face value amounts of perfectly worthless securities.

Several of the lesser-known brokerage houses are involved in the scheme, which, the authorities declare, shows the vulnerability of many existing investment trusts having billions of assets.

The policy of appeasement which Britain has been pursuing and which has met with notable and encouraging success in the Anglo-Italian agreement, cannot, it is recognised in London, be expected to produce immediate further beneficial results while the international situation is subject to the tension arising from the position in Spain and from the problem of the Sudeten Deutsche.

So long as these preoccupations exist, however, there is less possi-bility of a policy of appeasement making early progress in the direc-tion of seeking that consolidation of friendly relations between Britain and Cormany which it is Britain's

If a peaceful solution is found to the Sudeten question and satisfactory relations are in consequence cstablished between Germany and Czechoslovakia it appears from London that such a settlement, to which British good offices might be considered to have made an important contribution, would afford a fresh opportunity in London and It may be assumed that Britain ant contribution, would afford a fresh opportunity in London and Berlin for friendly consideration of Anglo-German relations.

CLAIM MADE FOR IT It's Wonderful!

'Accoustic Design' is an engineering principle. No other radio has it. It means that instead of the receiver, speaker and cabinet being separate elements, they are built in together, in 'tonal complement.' Until you hear the Mullard, you cannot imagine what marvellous results this ensures...

high clear notes, rich low notes, every full toned inflection. You've never heard such powerful long-distance reception-it is absolutely sensational. On shortwave, English, European and American stations "come-in" with the full strength and clarity of a local broadcasting station. Mullard is giving a new meaning, a new era to radio reception.

BRILLIANT COMEDY FILM

The programme, commencing a three day season this afternoon at the Mayfair Theatre, Napier, with two sessions daily, consists of two powerful dramas, newsreel, latest "Strange as it Seems," and episode four of the thrilling jungle serial, "Jim Tyler's Luck."

An avalanche of comedians will descend upon the screen of the Gaiety Theatre, Napier, to-morrow in the new comedy picture, "Beg, Borrow or Steal," which offers Frank Morgan, Florence Rice and John Beal in the leading roles.

four of the thrilling jungle serial, "Jim Tyler's Luck."
Ralph Bellamy, William Gargan Josephine Hutchison and Barbara Reade are featured in the first drama, "The Crime of Dr. Hallet." It is a powerful and poignant picture. It tears at the heart strings and holds the interest from the moment that Dr Hallet is first seen fighting a tragic misunderstanding in his Sumatran jungle laboratory, until the moment when he plucks victory and love from the jaws of defeat, and the snares of hatred.

Stirring emotion which tears at the heart strings, similar to that which highlights many great murder trials, is revealed in the second drama, "The Jury's Secret," featuring Kent Taylor, Fay Fray, Nan Grey and Larry Blake.

Larry Blake purtrays Bill Sgeldon, young labour leader, who arouses his community to a fevered pitch when he accuses a capitalist of being responsible for the flood four of the thrilling jungle serial, "Jim Tyler's Luck."

STRANGE MEXICO

Endeavour to Avoid Bloodshed

MILITARY ESCORTS

"People seem to regard Mexico as a country of bandits and bloodshed," said Miss G. M. Mullens, of Sacramento, California, who passed through Auckland this week by the Monterey, en route to the United States after a holiday tour of the East and Australia.

Referring to the reputation of Mexico, Miss Mullens said that in a country where every man carried arms accidents were bound to happen. While it certainly was a country of strange ways and customs, Mexico was not actually as dangerous as people believed. The authorities were doing much to avoid bloodshed and trouble. Every train carried a military escort and at night all blinds were drawn for fear of stray bullets finding a mark.

"The Mexican people are a strange mixture of fierceness and gaiety, and their enthusiasm is almost childlike," said Miss Mullens. "In spite of their fiery natures they are really very easily led and an eloquent leader can gain their endless support for the most fantastic dream."

While visiting Mexico, Miss Mul-While visiting Mexico, Miss Mullens attended several of the great flestas which are an important feature of national life. The festival of the Day of the Dead she considered one of the most impressive. From October 31 to November 1, the great ceremony occupied all the time of the people. In the cities it was a most gruesome performance with confectioners' windows displaying sweetmeats in the form of ing sweetmeats in the form of death's heads, coffins and skulls, which the small children enjoyed with relish. In the villages, however, the festival was much less sophisticated, the cemeteries being covered with yellow flowers and innumerable candles, while people gathered all through the night to pay homage to the dead.

of their Household, with Lord Cromer at their head, walked to the other end of the palace. Lord Cromer, with his traditional wand of office, and other officials led the way and, walking backwards, ushered their Majesties to the Thrones. On duty were the four Indian officers drawn from Gurkha regiments appointed to attend the King throughout the summer, as his orderlies on all State occasions. Brilliantly uniformed, too, were the Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms, the King's renowned bodyguard.

Auckland.

Comparatively new in the neon field in New Zealand (the company is not yet two years old), Rayneon has introduced new methods of neon lighting, hitherto unknown in the Dominion, and by the excellence of its work and the splendid service which it gives to all its clients, the firm can definitely claim to have already established itself as one of the leading neon companies in New Zealand to-day.

New Features

The neon work in the Municipal The neon work in the Municipal Theatre embraces features entirely new in this class of work. By a combination of concealed tubes, seven different colour effects are obtained, which floodlight the dome in the auditorium of the Napier theatre, the colours automatically changing event to seconds. changing every ten seconds. In the foyer, the whole of which is lit solely by neon, the walls are flood lit with concealed neon tubes running right round the walls, but the main feature is the two neon lamps which were specially designed for the theatre, and which are the first of their kind to be erected in the Quite recently scientists overseas discovered a new process in the neon world, which is called Fluorescent. This new process produces a neon tube which gives a light seven times more powerful than any other neon tube previously in existence and Rayneon has, wherever possible used Fluorescent neon in the theatre installation. It is worthy of note that although this new discovery gives such a wonderful illumination that the actual amount of electricity consumed is no greater than that used with the ordinary tubes.

An Invitation

The executive of Rayneon, Ltd., extends a cordial invitation to anyone who may be visiting Auckland to pay a visit to the company's showrooms and factory, which are suited in Chancery Lane, where they will be shown all the latest scientific methods used in the production of neon lighting.

Mr H. Wardell-Johnson, of Dickens Street, Napier, is the district manager for Rayneon, Ltd., and his advice and assistance are always available for anyone who may be considering installing the latest methods of neon lighting or advertising.*

Napier people have every reason to feel proud of the new Municipal Theatre, which will be officially opened by the Mayor (Mr T. W. Hercock) this afternoon. Having been without a theatre catering for stage performances since the earthquake, the town has now a fine new building capable of accommodating any travelling company likely to visit the Advantage has been taken by the architect (Mr R. M. Watson) of every modern discovery in new equipment, lighting, furnishings, and theatre equipment and design. In addition to being a notable addition to the architecture of a modern city, the new building can withstand any criticism from the point of view of strength of construction, aesthetic qualities, comfort and convenience of patrons, and the completeness of the stage equipment itself. It will seat 1154 persons—310 in the circle and 844 in the stalls.

"If only I were one of His Sheep."

A dear girl on a bed of sickness was most anxious to be saved. A friend, knowing her distress, sent her a scripture text card through the post. Slowly she read:

"I give unto them [My Sheep] eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." (John 10.28).

As she sank back on the pillow, she said, "If only I were one of His sheep I should be happy."
However, as the card fell on the coveriet, it turned over, and displayed a text on the other side. Taking it again she read:

"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. (1 Tim. 1.15).

mers. (1 Tim. 1.15).

"Oh!" she said as this glorious Gospel verse enlightened her soul, "if I'm not a sheep, I'm a sinner, and Christ Jesus came to save sinners." There she trusted Him, there He received her, and putting her upon His strong shoulders, she learned that the blessed Saviour of sinners is the Shepherd of the sheep, and in perfect safety He keeps all whom He saves.

"The Falling Birthrate is a Challenge to Women"

Sir,—I am fed up. I read two of the most interesting articles I have seen for a long time in your paper —the editorials entitled "Looking to the Future" dealing with population statistics. Certainly they aroused much public interest. But not nearly enough. We all seem to sit smug and prudish. The very organisations in the community that you would expect to tackle such subjects seriexpect to tackle such subjects seriously deal with mere inanities. Frequently one reads of this guild or that, or this women's club or that, or this hand of the W.C.T.U., etc., etc., or that having whatever they have in afternoons but nary a word about peopulation, the evils of rd about population, the evils of h control and the need for a birth control and the need for a higher standard of morality among unmarried people. Women these days seem to wear winkers. They certainly take little part in the real affairs of the times as they con-cern their own country. Rather are they content to listen to the drivelthey content to listen to the drivellings of visitors from other countries. They say "How nice," "How interesting," and more of that sort of thing but I claim that the concentrated attention they give to New Kealand and New Zealand problems is as valuable as a bent pin in a fishing competition. Away with smugness and let's have realities.
The birthrate is a disgrace to women as well as to men. It should be a challenge to them to forsake their selfishness. Family life has died because of selfish women.

because of selfish women.

How often do you see the lifted How often do you see the lifted eyebrow when any reference is made these days to a woman who has "so many children" (any large number). "Poor woman!" The murmurs go round, "Poor Mrs So and So. What a pity." Naturally she won't take part in bridge gambling and morning and afternoon gossiping but she is probably all the happier for not doing so and she, above all others of her sex, should be put on a pedestal and honoured by the nation and each individual in the nation.—I am, etc.,

A PLAIN SPEAKING WOMAN.

Sir. After reading the report on of public opinion generally. Mrs Stone's address to a meeting at Waipukurau, I wish per medium of RESULT OF your paper, to compliment her on her able address, yet at the same INQUIRIES time suggest there was one error, and that was regarding the statement made in reference to the National Superannuation Scheme. Mrs Stone stated that the 1/- in the health insurance. The health scheme will, I believe, provide doctor, medicine, hospital, etc., all for, I presume, one-third of the total amount of the tax. Now, after noticing this error, I would suggest that when Mrs Stone or others who are interested in the National Party address meetings that they stick to the truth and real facts, for to be candid after reading the report I said to myself, why didn't Mrs Stone tell the meeting what the 1/-in the f tax is really for instead of sidestepping and probably bring unnecessary criticism on the party, for we must tell the people the whole truth and stick to facts if we wish to gain their confidence and win them to the Nationalist banner. win them to the Nationalist banner. _I am, etc.,

PROBLEMS OF MIGRATION HAWKE'S BAY REVIEWED

Aims of the Five Million Club

COMPREHENSIVE SURVEY OF MIGRATION COMMITTEE

First Section of Report

The formation of the "Five Million Club" has been of more than passing interest to those concerned with the problem of New Zealand's standstill population. The objectives of the Club are to investigate the causes of population decline, and to conduct a research into methods of rectifying it. The club is non-political and is concerned only with the question of adding to New Zealand's scant population, and it has taken immigration as the subject of its first investigations.

The report of the Migration Committee of the Five Million Club deals with all the various factors entering into the problem of migration, and should be of great interest to those concerned with the future of the Dominion. Owing to the length of the report and the variety of subjects covered it is impossible to publish it complete, so the "Daily Mail" has taken the course of dividing the report into approximately six sections, which are being run consecutively.

of immigration the most encouraging sign is the absence of any strong body of opposition opinion. If favourable opinion is latent rather than active at least opposition is lukewarm rather than adams.

Our experience has been that opposition is stimulated by the single factor, fear; and that this fear is due to a misunderstanding or ignorance of the principles of immigration and the laws of population. It is clearly expressed in the reasons given for opposing any resumption of immigration. These reasons fall into certain well-defined categories. In the order of importance, judged by the frequency of employment, the reasons are stated below:—

REASONS FOR

OPPOSITION

The work of the migration committee, states the report, has been divided into two parts. First, we have tried to discover what public opinion is regarding the question of population as it affects this Dominion, and as a corollary to this part of our inquiry we have endeavoured to find out the nature and extent of public reaction to an early resumption of immigration as a means of supplementing the rate of natural increase. Secondly, we have considered certain schemes for re-starting immigration either now or at some future date. These schemes, together with our suggestions as to the steps that it is deemed necessary to take in order to gain public support and understanding, form our recommendations.

In order to obtain the widest possible coverage of national opinion a series of questionaires was sent to the various branches of this organisation throughout the Dominion. The questions were framed ganisation throughout the Dominion. The questions were framed in such a way that all shades of public opinion would be solicited. And, in order to avoid the possibility of receiving only those opinions which were favourable to immigration, branch committees were asked to obtain the views of people selected from all walks of life who were not themselves members of this organisation.

A further precaution taken against the possibility of bias was that members of this committee that members of this committee undertook to interrogate as many persons as possible with whom they came in contact during the normal course of the day. As certain members of this committee are constantly travelling throughout the Dominion it is felt that the opinions they were able to obtain may be regarded as fairly representational

The replies received from the branches to the questionnaires, with one or two notable exceptions, were on first examination disappointing. But when compared with the re-sults obtained from the individual sults obtained from the individual inquiries made by various members of this committee it was realised that the apathy shown by the branches was largely a reflection of the attitude of the public generally. It has been found that there is a tacit agreement that this Dominion would benefit from an increase of total population at a greater rate than is possible with the present net reproductive rate.

There is a vague feeling that New Zealand is at present handicapped by under-population. To this extent, and to this extent only, there is something like unanimity of public sentiment. Thereafter there is evidence of considerable diversity of opinion. Even among those who

Standing For Parliament

FORMER MAYOR

Business Visit To Hastings

FLOOD BUSINESS

We have reached the conclusion that the public would support Government action in this direction, but that individually people do not feel it incumbent upon themselves, even if they thought themselves competent to do so, to consider in detail what action should be taken to encourage immigration to New Zealand. A statement that he would be standing for Parliament at the next general election, but not with any particular party, was given by a former mayor of Hastings, Mr H. Ian Simpson, yesterday. Mr Simpson is at present visiting Hastings on business.

He had always been an independ-

He had always been an independent Liberal, said Mr Simpson in an interview yesterday. He still was; and he would stand as one this time. It had not been decided finally whether he would be a candidate in Motueka, Hawke's Bay, or in another electorate.

On analysis public sentiment would seem to be that if people are prepared to give passive support to whatever plans are ultimately devised they are doing all that can be justifiably expected of them. They are willing to give such support provided that they can be assured that local interests are being fully safeguarded. We think it would be a mistake to expect any large proportion of the public to take more than a superficial interest in any schemes for immigration that may be formulated. Provided that the people can see that their own interests are not going to be jeopardised by a resumption of immigration they are not very interested in the question. other electorate.

Provided that the people can see that their own interests are not going to be jeopardised by a resumption of immigration they are not very interested in the question.

Without an intensive propaganda campaign we doubt whether public opinion would ever become more demonstrative than it is at present. From the point of view of those

Previously, I kept four big horses and could not cope with the work — now I do everything with the Fordson, including ploughing, rotary hoeing, harrowing, rolling, mowing, sweeping, hauling, etc. The tractor will do as much in two hours as the horses in eight hours. My land is from flat to hilly, but it makes no difference to the Fordson — in fact my hair has stood on end when I have seen where my son was going with it. #### THE QUESTION OF IMMIGRATION

The most pleasing feature of the report presented by the Migration Committee of the Five Million Club is the practical manner in which the problems of immigration have been approached. In these days of flatulent opinionism and freakish theories, it is refreshing to note that at least one of the Dominion's major problems is being investigated and discussed on the basis of fact and practical

Admittedly there is room for considerable difference of opinion on the subject of immigration, but since such controversy can have but one objective—the solution of our population problem—it should eventually resolve into a question of interpretation of fact and the discussion of relevant conclusions.

The committee has clearly established the point that New Zealand's population is inadequate to develop fully the natural resources and potentialities of the Dominion. Further, that the lack of variety in our existing means of employment and production constitutes a serious danger, in that it renders the country vulnerable to even slight economic fluctuations overseas. This lack of resiliency has been strikingly demonstrated during recent years, when a fall in wool and meat, or in dairy produce, has had the most deleterious

Since the bulk of our principal agrarian production goes overseas, it is obvious that we are economically dependent upon the values that we receive for it. Similarly, any future diminution of the overseas demand would have most drastic repercussions in New Zealand, as we have insufficient population to absorb any appreciable surplus,

This is a plain statement of the position as it actually exists, and is worth stressing for the benefit of those who believe that New Zealand can be disinterested in overseas trends. Statements have been made that it would be possible to isolate the Dominion from the effects of adverse world conditions, but there is no political nostrum in the world sufficiently effective to counter a fall in overseas demand and prices. Ordinary common sense, combined with the personal experience of the average individual, should be sufficient to demonstrate and substantiate the truth of this.

At the moment it is impossible for the Dominion to avoid the impact of adverse factors in external trade. Government policy should, and must be, founded on this basis if stability is to be maintained. Common prudence will dictate a policy for the husbanding of reserves, and the provision of measures calculated to give the individual economic units of the country (agricultural and industrial production and the like) the greatest possible room to expand and avenues of income.

Mere tinkering with the existing factors of production, trade, and industry can be, at best, a jejune policy of expediency, and, as the Migration Committee points out, the solving of the Dominion's problems lies more in a comprehensive long-range policy aiming at a greater measure of secure self-sufficiency.

example and their advice do not fall on barren ground.

Two Englishmen Extend Hospitality To The Sheikhs

The setting was wild and romantic—the latter more in retrospect than in actual fact.

We were staying the night on a rocky plateau in the Southern Arabian desert. All around us were bare, harshly rug-ged hills. With the exception of grey stunted camel thorn there was no green leaf for miles. It was like camping among the slag heaps of some gigantic furnace.

About a mile away there was a village, on the edge of a wadi where the Arabs grow their crops and The sheep was removed a little the Arabs grow their crops and draw water from shallow brackish distance away, killed and skinned. Mr John Ord Shearer, M.A. (N.Z.), Interesting Story

There is an interesting story attached to the photograph of the first memorial to New Zealand soldiers in Hobart which has been donated to the New Plymouth museum by Mr C. J. O'Keefe, Auckland. Clearly, then, there is a strong case (a) for building up a population sufficient to absorb a greater proportion of our existing surplus production, which is at present disposed of as exports; and (b) to provide new avenues for employment and industry, allowing for a greater measure of self-sufficiency, and in order to ensure that economic resiliency necessary to mitigate the effects of overseas depression conditions.

One of the most vital requirements of the day is the need for dealing with realities in a practical manner. Unfortunately, New Zealand has had a tendency to wander off along the paths of extravagant theory and fanciful experiment, and the manner in which the committee has avoided this too-common fault deserves the gratitude and commendation of the community. Close Confinement: Serious Breach of Discipline

By Telegraph-Press Association. AUCKLAND, June 2.

A sentence of four days' close confinement, accused to be fed on bread and water, was imposed on an inmate of the Auckland prison, James Toko, aged 34, a Maori, by Mr C. R. Orr-Walker, S.M., in the Police Court to-day.

Accused, who was charged with using personal violence against the deputy-principal warder, Mr Mc-Leod, pleaded guilty.

Leod, pleaded guilty.

Superintendent Leggett said that accused, who had cut his finger while working in the prison quarry, paraded with others on the sick list, but apparently did not want to go before the medical officer. He was told by Mr McLeod that he would have to see the doctor and taking the officer unawares, accused struck him in the face with his fist.

"Actions of this kind are particularly serious in respect to the discipline of the prison." said Superintendent Leggett. "Accused is a man given to violence. He is serving a gentence of two years' imprisonment and has been declared an habitual criminal."

It had been asserted, Mr Fraser said, that Labour had a minority vote of the electors.

While that was true, it was also true of all governments since 1912. Yet all had carried on.

When the people understood that he issue of the next election was either forward or backward, they would not hesitate to give Labour a substantial majority, the Minister asserted.

United Press Association—Copyright. (Received June 2, 9.30 p.m.) WASHINGTON, June 1.

Because President Roosevelt dreamt and told of his dream, a group of Congressmen in the Legislature will appropriate shortly £2,000,000 to build a modern airport near Camp Springs, Maryland.

President Roosevelt disclosed that, following the Cleveland disaster on May 25, when ten persons were killed in a transport 'plane crash, he dream that he arose from his bed, walked to a White House window, and saw a terrible crash.

Speaking at the present Camp Springs airport, which has been attacked for a long time because it is considered to be too hazardous and too small for large commercial air lines, President Roosevelt insisted that it was imperative to prevent any such crash as he saw in his dream.

The appropriation is likely before Congress adjourns, probably on June 15.

SUGGESTED ALTERATION IN EXPORT OF PEARS

Pre-Chilling The Fruit Before Packing and Wrapping

An alteration in the procedure in the export of pears, which he believes would mean increased revenue from and a longer season for this industry, is advocated by the Inspector of Cool Stores to the Department of Agriculture (Mr A. Powell), who arrived in Hastings yesterday.

Mr Powell, who was recently appointed to this position, has had a lifetime's experience in the fruit trade, both in Australian and Nelson orchards.

Yesterday he reported that from his experience, pears should be prechilled before they were packed, and wrapped and placed back in the cool

At present, pears were not placed in cool storage until after they were wrapped and packed. The new proposal would mean that any existing warmth in the apple would be removed and the fruit would be shipped not too mature.

Lengthening Export Season. This would have the effect, said Mr Powell, of spreading the export season over a much greater period without ill-effects to the fruit.

It would also mean that the morefavoured varieties in other countries could be grown and kept with cool could be grown and kept with cool storage in excellent condition until they were required.

This would have the further effect of increasing the price of the varieties which were in favour.

This would mean higher returns to the orchardist.

Mr Powell is planning to make improvements to the existing cool stores in New Zealand, and to this end he is making a thorough inspection of the stores.

The Nicaraguan Canal is Discussed

Costly Project

Great Importance and Strategic Value

That a new canal giving access from the Pacific to the Atlantic is essential is the opinion of Charles E. Chapel, formerly a First Lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps. Writing for the "Christian Science Monitor" Mr Chapel gives his reasons for supporting the projected canal which is planned to pass through Nicaragua, from the Pacific into the Caribbean Sea, thus giving an alternative to the Panama Canal.

It asks, in round numbers, £60,- before turning a spadeful of dirt 000,000 as an initial expenditure, with construction spread over a 10-year period, at an estimated total cost of £160,000,000.

National Security

Bound up with any canal question is the subject of national security. Since America's policy is one of defence, and not offence, it is interesting to find that in his final report on the survey of the Nicaragua route, Colonel Sultan considered the advantage of having a canal through which the United States can pass its fleet from coast to coast. Knowing that the Nicara-guan route is 200 miles by air closer to the United States than the Panama Canal, he said:-

"Against attack, the probability of keeping open one waterway is much greater if there are two canals rather than one. A hostile power would find it difficult to capture or destroy both of the two canal systems. . . . First Meeting of Season

HASTINGS BRANCH

The first meeting this season of the instrumental group of the British Music Society was held on Tuesday night at the home of Mrs A. H. Pope, Townshend Street, Hastings. A quite considerable, and very appreciative, audience listened to the following programme, presented under the leadership of

Miss I. Clayton:

Miss A. Lock, "Cherry Ripe" (Cyril Scott) and "Windmills" (E. J. Moeran); Mrs S. Miller, "Ballade in A Flat" (Chopin); Mrs I. H. Blair, Sonata in F. Major (Beethoven); Miss Clayton, "Menuette and Larghetto," from Sonata in C Minor (Chopin).

The Nicaraguan Canal is once more an issue before the American Congress. Representative Edouard Izac, of California, has introduced a bill proposing work on this second great sea route.

If the United States national policy is indeed defensive, contrast the cost of a new fleet, £600,000,000 a life sketch by Sigred Onegin were with that of a Nicaraguan canal, which is less than £200,000,000. Even ford and the Misses D. and M. McLeod.

HALF-HOLIDAY CHANGE IN HASTINGS BOROUGH

Fillip To Trade and Shopping: Mayor and Public Body Officers Make Plea

A strong plea for the co-operation of citizens, urban and rural, in assisting Hastings to adapt itself to the change from a Thursday to a Saturday half-day, is made in special mes-sages to the "Daily Mail" from his Worship the Mayor (Mr G. A. Maddison) and from presidents of bodies taking an active interest in the transition period.

The organisations most interested in the change, and most interested in seeing that the change marks an era of new progress, are the Hastings Progress League, the Hastings Chamber of Commerce, and the Hastings Retailers' Association. Through their efforts, a fillip will be given to trade and shopping within the town, and endeavours will be made to ensure the successful exploitation of the innovation.

Superstitious Fears of Maoris Now Being Allayed

"Daily Mail" Special Service.

AUCKLAND, June 1.

There appears to be no doubt now that the 42-year-old Indian, Dalu Desai, who disappeared on May 7 from the lonely Maori settlement of Tahuroa, on the southern side of the Kawhia Harbour, was murdered.
The discovery by a young Maori of a suit of Desal's clothes buried in a shallow drift of sand not more than one mile from the store in which the missing man worked, added to certain facts which may betterment. I feel that its residents, in expressing a desire for the change, considered the welfare and progress of the town and its people.

"It therefore remains now for all to co-operate whole-heartedly and to contribute to the future that measure of progress which our town and district deserve."

IMPORTANCE OF

CHANGE

The extreme importance of the change is emphasised by the president of the Hastings Progress League (Mr A. I. Rainbow) in a reference to the league's attitude.

"The change of the weekly halfholiday from Thursday to Saturday produces a new situation for Hastings, and the Progress League has considered proposals for making than one mile from the store in which the missing man worked, added to certain facts which may not be disclosed, has been the first definite clue to stimulate the police in the search for his body. It has been openly said that there could be no question that Desai did not die of his own hand, and there is information that the authorities possess evidence strengthening the view that he met with violent death. There had been a suggestion that Desai might have taken his own life, but recent developments indicate a complete lack of motive for his doing so.

The township of Kawhia is agog with matters of fact concerning the dead man as well as with conjecture upon the possible cause of his death, but a number of Maoris who were questioned to-day could say only this, that Desai or "Jimmy" as he was known to them, was well liked. The Maoris trusted him, and they believed that he was murdered.

Up to now detectives and uni-Op to now detectives and uni-formed men have been unlucky with their dragging equipment and the work of probing Lake Tahuroa —a reed-choked area of 1000 acres or thereabouts—has to some extent been thwarted through the inability of comparatively low-powered out-board motors to haul the drags.

By to-morrow evening the position will be altered, as the Commissioner of Police (Mr D. J. Cummings), has requisitioned two of the most powerful motors to be found in New Zealand and they will arrive at Lake Tahuroa late to-morrow. row morning or in the early after-noon. In all probability the Com-missioner of Police will leave Ham-ilton at the same time as the motors are dispatched.

Difficulties of Police

In the early stages the major problem was divided more or less problem was divided more or less into two parts; the superstitious fear of 100 or more Maoris, who, with the exception of the school-teacher and his wife, form the entire population of the settlement, and the circumstance that at least half the natives are unable to speak English. While the police were unable to make much headway in the able to make much headway in the collection of evidence which might prove valuable in the early discovery of Desai's body, or which may at least indicate who was the last person to see him alive, at length some educated Maoris were discovered in the settlement and the work of intowinving headman. work of interviewing became much

"A third of the farmers of New Zealand are members of the Farmers' Union, but farmers are still the most poorly organised section of the community," stated the organiser, Mr O. E. The total membership of the union was 5000 greater to-day than at this time last year, Mr Niederer continued. The union had been in existence for 38 years but the membership had not increased very much until a few years ago when had organizers were employed.

The West Coast from which you come is not favoured in quite the same way but nature has which you come is not layoured in quite the same way, but nature has more than made up for this by the wonderful forests, the inexhaustible supplies of the finest coal and other metals, and with it all an environment that has made it famous for its hospitality.

wironment that has made it famous for its hospitality.

"In other ways, although we have our differences, we have very much in common. Your farmers and our farmers have the one objective—to entice nature to yield more and more of the good things man requires. I could say a great deal about the scenic beauty and the wonderful attractions in your province, but, being a West Coaster myself, it might be construed that we are a little conceited. So I shall conclude by wishing you all a most happy and enjoyable time amongst our people."

grains. Of these maize, wheat, barley, and peas are the richest source. Pollard and oats are next on the list, whereas bran is only about twothirds of the value of wheat. As sources of minerals most of the feeds are poor. Peas, however, contain fairly large quantities of lime, and bran is comparatively well supplied with minerals. ADEQUATE WELL-BALANCED DIET IS NEEDED

Heat and Fat-Producing Food, Flesh-Formers and Minerals

(By Veterinarian)

Much has been said of the necessity for an adequate and well-balanced diet for all classes of stock. Not only does diet play an important part in the prevention of disease, but the proper utilisation of feedstuffs makes all the difference between producing at a profit and just managing to make ends

An adequate and well-balanced diet for any particular class of stock is not necessarily any particular combination of feeds. All that such a diet need supply is an adequacy of heat and fat-producing food ingredients, an adequacy of flesh formers and sufficient minerals and vitamins. Bulk is also required, this being more necessary for the ruminants—sheep

It must be born in mind, however, that for growth, during pregnancy and lactation, or during the performance of work, not only is a greater quantity of feed required, but the quantity of the different ingredients required varies. For instance for growth and lactation larger proportions of the flesh-formers are required. For formers are required. For work the call is for greater supplies of heat or energy-producing feeds.

It should be of some assistance to farmers therefore, to discuss the various common types of available feed. This discussion will firstly deal with them as suppliers of en-ergy, flesh forming material and so on, and secondly with the use of the feeds for different purposes.

The fats, sugars and starches are The fats, sugars and starenes are the source of energy supply for the animal. This energy may be used for keeping the animal warm, for the energy required in such essential processes as breathing and the beating of the heart, and lastly for the storage of energy in the form of fat

Fats are a more concentrated source of energy than are the sugars or starches, but they can only be utilised efficiently when there is at the same time an adequacy of sugars and starches in the feed. Hence for practical purposes sugars and starches are the most valuable source of energy.

In addition to these three submost concentrated form are the Proteins are the flesh forming portions of feedstuffs. They can also be used for energy production purposes, but their chief value is for the formation of flesh and for the maintenance and repair of all the body tissues.

An interesting feature about pro-teins, and an important one, is that each protein is made up of numer-ous component parts termed amino-

Certain of these amino-acids are essential for life and for growth. Hence those proteins which contain proteins and minerals than the native grasses. Clovers and lucerne all these essential amino-acids are all these essential amino-acids are of the most value—ones which are incomplete in this respect are useful only when the missing amino-acids are supplied by other proteins in the diet. This is one of the reasons for the necessity of a mixed diet.

The grains are a medium source of supply of flesh formers. Although oats has not a high quantity of proteins those which are present supply all the essential amino-acids. Hence oats is quite a valuable source of protein

Other feeds which act mainly as a source of energy are hays, chaff, straws and roots.

Hays, when well cured are very valuable for this purpose. They are about one-third to half as rich in energy producers as are the grains. Poorly cured hay is, however, no better than straw. Hays are a fair source of minerals, and when well cured have a moderately high quantity of proteins. This is especially so in the case of lucerne and clover

Value of Roots

The straws are of little value for energy production, because of their high quantity of fibre. For adding bulk to the ration and as sources of heat only they do, however, serve a useful purpose. Their value is enhanced in cold weather. Oat sheaf chaff can be well compared

The most concentrated protein feeds are meat-meal, linseed, peas and various cakes and meals which are seldom seen in the New Zealand market. The most economical source is meat-meal, which because of its origin (the animal body) con-of its origin (the animal body) contains all the essential components.

Mention might be made here of dried grass. The practice of artificially drying grass has been carried out in Europe. Claims are made that grass when so dried retains all the valuable energy producing, flesh forming and mineral constituents of the original product. The fact that it is dried reduces its bulk and allows for storage. If these claims are true it would appear that the practice of artificial drying of grass could hold a very important place in farming practice.

Bradman Has Phenomenal Tally

The Australians' first Test against England begins at Nottingham next week. Interest in the Test series has been intensified by the phenomenal initial success of the Australians, and to many the result of the match will provide a test for an assessment of the tourists.

A total of 139 tests have been played between England and Australia, Australia have won 56, England 54 and 29 have been drawn. It is interesting to note that the record at Nottingham is two wins for each country, with two drawn.

Bradman still heads the batting with 1056 runs at an average of 150.85. Bradman's total includes two double centuries and three scores of over 100.

Hassett, a newcomer in the Australian side, is 'second with 739 and 123.16. This batsman has a score of 220 not out to his credit and also two centuries.

Badcocks' phenomenal rate of scoring in the early matches has wickets, at 18.64. McCabe's value as a change bowler is illustrated by his six wickets at 22.00.

McCormick, the fast bowler, who early in the tour had trouble with his run-up, now appears to be in form. In the Middlesex match he got six wickets for 58 runs. His figures are 15 wickets at an average of 23.80.

Bob White, the Marist wing-threequarters, who has represented the province with distinction in the past, has been an unlucky player so far this season. forced to retire from the game. It would be a pity if he were precluded from again representing Hawke's Bay because of an injured knee, so all football enthusiasts are wishing him a speedy healing of his one and only weak link.
White has had a great following in Hawke's Bay football this season, but he was reported earlier in the season as having suffered a knee injury.

After a good round at the new Waipawa golf links designed by him, Mr John Lambie, popular Hastings professional, was subjected by some of his friends to the "sly dig" that he had designed the course with an eye to his own shots. "Jock," who some years ago "holed-in-one" by pitching in on the full, almost repeated his feat at the ninth, where his tee shot landed within six inches of the pin. He further demonstrat-ed his "local knowledge" by scoring "birdies" at several of the holes.

YEARS IN FIRST-CLASS CRICKET

Don Bradman's Fine Records PERFORMANCES ARE REVIEWED UP TO 1937

1000 Runs in Eight Seasons

In 1937, Don Bradman completed 10 years of first-class cricket. During that period many of his batting performances have been unprecedented, writes an Australian, the Hon. Mr Justice Herbert V. Evatt, in the 1938 edition of Wisden's Cricket Almanac. Bradman has broken one record after another and already, in actual achievement, he has far surpassed the performances of all other batsmen in Australia.

There is an easy-going tendency to discount the significance of cricket records and averages and in some circumstances they may be misleading. But, in the long run, the records may lead irresistibly to certain conclusions, and in Bradman's case they prove beyond doubt that he is one of the very greatest batsmen of all time, possessing the faculty of doing his best on the most important occasions.

Owing to the limited quantity of first-class cricket, the feat of scoring a thousand runs in an Australian season is very rarely performed. Very few Australian cricketers have done it at all, and, with the exception of Bradman, not one of them more than twice. Bradman has scored 1000 runs in every season he has played, except his first, that is, on eight separate and consecutive occasions.

The details are as follows (giving the season, the number of innings, the times not out, his highest score, the total runs 11	nd his ave	erage	ere	especti	vely):

1934: 8, 0, 304, 758, 94.75. 1936-37: 9, 0, 270, 810, 90.00. In no fewer than 27 of his 61, three-figure innings, Bradman has scored 200 or over. It follows that, provided Bradman reaches 100, it is almost an even chance that he will reach 200. Averaging his century scores, the result is 194 runs per innings, or 242 per completed innings. His performances in minor cricket may be briefly mentioned. In Australian grade or pennant cricket, he has scored 4304 runs at an average of 86 per innings. In all second class matches he has scored 19,131 runs, also at an average of 86 per

During the tour of the Australian team to America in 1932, he scored 3779 runs at an average of 102, ob-taining 18 centuries. In first and second-class cricket he had aggregated 141 centuries to 1937.

Bradman's figures are necessarily ilent as to important aspects of his batting. At times his speed of scoring has been phenomenal. For instance, his world's record score of 452 not out was made in 406 minutes. Typical of his brilliant hit-ting in Sheffield Shield cricket was the 238 in 175 minutes obtained for New South Wales v. Victoria in 1932. His record test score of 334 at Leeds in 1930 was made in 381 minutes. In 1934 at Folkstone, he hit Freeman for 30 in one over. At Scarborough in the same season he scored 132 in 90 minutes. In 1931-32 in a second-class fixture at Black-heath, New South Wales, Bradman and Wendell Gill scored 102 in three eight-ball overs, Bradman obtaining 100 out of the 102. He hit 10 sixes and nine fours, including 40 in one over. His total for the innings was 256, including fourteen sixes and twenty-nine fours.

Whatever the original limitations of his stroke repertoire, Bradman has become master of every stroke of the game. But the outstanding quality of his batting skill is that he employs it functionally, ever adjusting it to the task in hand. In England in 1934, when he was fight-ing against the onset of illness, some of the critics declared that he had degenerated to a mere slogger. But he rose to the great occasion of the fourth and fifth tests. Undoubtedly his big partnership

Several interesting trials were performed and it appears that Hastings horses will figure very prominently in the decision of the majority of the races on Saturday. Although a few horses were sent on the plough, the majority of the fast work was done on the outside of the course proper, where the going was excellent if a trifle easy down the back stretch.

Hunting Blood was not timed, but he went very freely over a few furlongs. The Trimmer came home over the last three furlongs of his work in 43 2-5sec.

Trilliarch showed to more advantage than Pirate King and Barrister, the latter being several lengths back at the end of five furlongs run in 1.5 2.5, the best of the morning.

Jolly Beggar Pleases.

The jumpers Jolly Beggar and All Irish, went particularly well over a round, which took 1.58 2.5, the last seven furlongs occupying 1.36 4.5. Jolly Beggar finished in front.

Hirangi was given strong work, covering about a mile and a half. Te Hai was in front of Ohmaha, with Shy easing up, at the conclusion of a half mile in 51 4-5sec. Te Hai put plenty of dash into his task, and it was a good effort.

Imagen was not asked to do not be best to cover half a mile in 53.

Inheritance drew right away from Dusky Crown over the concluding part of a mile in 1.50\(\frac{1}{2}\). Inheritance worked well but he has disappointed too often in the past with the colours up, to earn many friends by this effort.
