NO POWER ABLE TO ATTACK AUSTRALIA FROM THE AIR

British Air Marshal Says That Raids Can Only Be Made By Sea-Borne 'Planes

> United Press Association-Copyright. (Received June 29, 9 p.m.)

SYDNEY, June 29.

In an interview with the "Sun," Air Marshal Sir Edward Ellington, who is reporting on Australia's air defences, said that no Power could make a serious air attack on Australia. Any Power desirous of launching an air attack would have to establish very efficient lines of communication.

Sea-borne aircraft would be the only means of attempting such a raid by any nation other than Holland, and even this method could not be effective under present conditions. Sir Edward praised Australia's air force personnel.

(Received June 29, 8 p.m.) LONDON, June 29.

The Australian Associated Press says the fact that England might have won the first and second Tests if five days had been allocated does not alter the Australian objection to the futility of draws.

R. E. S. Wyatt, in the "Daily Mail," says that the Test again proved that the batting is too strong on both sides to enable a finish in four days.

"The Times" says that England can console themselves that they had the better of the game. They lost whatever chance of winning they had by over-indulgence in they had by over-indulgence in bowling on the leg stump, which was welcomed by the Australians.

ILLEGAL EXPENDITURE OF GOVERNMENT SUBSIDIES

Many N.Z. Rabbit Boards Have Been Breaking Law Unknowingly

For many years past, rabbit boards throughout the Dominion, without realising the fact, have been illegally expending Government subsidies under the terms of the Rabbit Nuisances Act.

Faulty Training Methods May Be Responsible For Poor Play

DANNEVIRKE.

Despite the fact that the senior games played at Rugby Park on Saturday were evenly contested, the standard of play was considerably lower than that of the previous inter-club games. tell us that there is no need for defence."

Mr Editor, I made no such statement and the careful reading of my letter which you printed word for word, will prove that "Another Loyalist" has twisted the details to fit into the narrow channel in which is party is moving.

I contend that defence in the shape of an efficient air force is necessary. To quote an extract from my original letter, I stated that: "I do not agree with "Loyalist" upon a great deal of coast defences, for I am of the opinion that the costs involved in building coastal defences would give far more satisfactory returns, if they were diverted for the purpose of obtaining and maintaining a highly efficient air force, which will in time to come, prove to be New Zealand's first line of defence." Speaking of the Chinas Squadron and dealing with a supposed invasion, etc., I stated that the invaders would have little show of getting past the Base, and if they did the remnants that survived the ordeal could easily be dealt with by a highly efficient air force. These two statements definitely bear out my contention of the real necessity for an up-todate air force, and contention of the real necessity for an up-todate air force, and contention of the real necessity for an up-todate air force, and contention of the real necessity for an up-todate air force, and contention of the real necessity for an up-todate air force, and the payers. The question of a site is discussed.

reply to "Another Loyalist" in your issue of June 24th.

In replying to "Another Loyalist" re his reply to Waikoura Erua, I should like to point out to him the necessity of carefully reading the correspondence as published, and to fully grasp the facts before he rushes into print with a tirade of remarks and bluster which have no bearing on the subject in debate. "Another Loyalist" says "Waikoura Erua talks about the defence of New Zealand and then proceeds to tell us that there is no need for defence."

The Mayor, in reply to a question, said that the matter of the baths had never been discussed by the council, and he would not like to say what their attitude would be. If, however, it were decided to proceed by way of loan it would be quite four or five months before any decision could be reached, and then it might be rejected by the rate payers. The question of a Centennial memorial was one that might very well be kept in view, as the limits.

HAVELOCK NORTH. A party was held last week by the Havelock North Basketball Club in Havelock North Basketball Club in honour of Miss Ruth Butcher, who is leaving with the New Zealand team for Australia. They met at Mr G. T. H. Joll's residence, Te Mata Road. During the evening the president of the club, Miss J. Harris, congratulated Miss Butcher on her well de-comments upon it, and if you have any difficulty whatsoever in comprehending the trend of the debate you will find that any man of average intelligence will be only too pleased to enlighten you.

In conclusion "Another Loyalist" I think that your attitude can be briefly defined by a quotation from that "Good Old Book" where it says that "None are so blind as those that "None are so blind as those who won't see."—I am, etc.,

"Why Should the Hospital Service be Used to Try And Grab Votes?"

And Grab Votes?"

Sir.—I am rather surprised to read that a member of the "Royal Fusiliers," a truly notable regiment, can be so affected by the trials of war, as to be "guiled" and mislead by Mr Savage's so-called "Social Security Fund."

Now let us take facts. A man 20 years of age has to be prepared to contribute for 40 years. Now, if he is ambitious, and has some aim and the solution of the solution of the increases and the solutions of the increase of the contribute for 40 years. Now, if he is ambitious, and has some aim and the solution of the war.

It is unnecessary, it reminds more than 12 to see thich is second to second to the ustake solution in the world should be used to try to grab votes. Our hospital or year wide open to all, and if a person is unable to pay, he is a person is unable to

Outstanding Performer

"A Murder Has Been Arranged" hinges on how convincing the "villain" happens to be, and here, as Maurice Mullins, Mr P. E. Clifton almost stole the thunder of the play itself. From his entry at the psy chological moment when, after first scene which had become quie enough to verge on staleness, terror of the unexpected began to approach a crescendo, the play never looked back. His acting, though he was obviously given most scope, eclipsed the acting of any of the others. He introduced life, punch, and reapping into the story; and and meaning into the story; and what is most important, he enter-tained. His portrayal of the plotter is concealing terror of the unknown mingled with a fear of being exposed for partial duplicity in a murder plot. Mixed emotions are not simple to accomplish. Her performance in such a role is one of merit. As Sir Jasper, interested in the occult and heir to a fortune, Mr H. R. Campbell takes another supporting part: but as a man who falls out with his wife and later plays the role of his own ghost, he appears in roles demanding ability in varied characterisations. He is well

Senior B: G. Clouston. On her falls the lot of suppressed fear. She, too, has a part demanding ability in "registering" emotions. She has to show her fondness to her husband, and her interest in a young admirer, Jimmy North (Mr A. R. Caro). Her ability shows at its best once "the murder is out" and the villain has to be trapped into the admission of guilt—trapped into the admission because his deviluable with a seemingly perfect alibi.

Two roles offering little scope for fine acting are those of Mrs Wragg (a servant), played by Miss Cynthia Jefferd, and Jimmy North (Mr Caro); but both these roles are or caro; but both these roles are played with a pleasing nonchalance.

Mr Caro, by gestures and by brusqueness, gives a clever impersonation of North, a man dominated primarily by impulse rather than by intellect. Miss Jefferd, true to her part as a non-sensitive servant, is part as a non-sensitive servant, is stolid and little impressed by fears haunting her mistress.

COLLECTIVE SECURITY

The principle of collective security, admirable though it may be, cannot be entertained seriously so long as the world is divided into existing factions and ideological alliances. It is futile for New Zealand, or any other country, to bleat like a lamb in the wilderness for collective security, when the wolves of aggression are roaming the

The whole idea of collective security is founded upon, and supported by, an all-inclusive League of Nations observing to the letter the League's Covenant. War, in such circumstances, is virtually impossible, and the settling of international disputes would be a matter for an International Court of Peace endowed with the jurisdiction and authority arising from the Articles of the Covenant.

However, when some of the most powerful nations of the world refuse to acknowledge the League, and when they persist in flinging insults in the face of League efforts, it is obvious that collective security is to-day impossible and impotent.

The foundering of the League may be ascribed to many causes, but there can be no doubt that the chief reason was the lack of-force and authority with which its will might be imposed. Thus Germany, Japan, and Italy in turn could afford to snap their fingers at the League. The only worthwhile attempt to assert the authority of the League—the sanctions applied against Italy—served merely to emphasise the futility of League efforts, and it resulted finally in a general practical desertion of collective security.

Unless a country has its head firmly wedged in the sand of selfdelusion, it should realise that so long as there exist strongly-armed Powers who will not hesitate to use force to secure their ends, and so long as there is no weapon of prevention other than military force, collective security is a mere myth.

The solution is as obvious as it is impossible at the present time. The League of Nations must be reconstructed so that it includes every separate nation on earth, but in particular the stronger Powers irrevocably and genuinely committed. Following this, the method of settling disputes must be clearly defined, and the processes of setting the machinery of authority to work must be simple, effective, and expeditious. Finally, the League must be clothed with the authority and power to impose its decisions where it may be necessary.

The real weakness of the League has been in the hesitancy of its members to commit themselves to any course which might involve them in a dispute with a recalcitrant nation. Thus, the fear of an embroilment in war has outweighed any consideration of international justice or even moral commitments under the League Covenant.

The suggestion that an international police force should be instituted in order to enforce peace or the authority and decisions of the League, and that all national armaments should be scrapped, seems the natural consequence of true collective security. Unfortunately there are few nations-and these mostly minor Powers-who would be prepared to adopt such a course.

New Zealand's cry for collective security merely reflects a universal desire for peace, but it is impossible for this, or any other country, to ignore existing circumstances and realities. We may work and strive to bring about a general appeasement which might pave the road to collective security and the reformation of the League, but until such time as the forces of aggression are dead in the world we must be prepared at all times to defend ourselves against them.

One often hears the question asked as to the methods whereby appeasement may be achieved. The answer should be: Compromise in the settlement of international disputes or grievances. Unfortunately, there are several Powers embarked on a crusade of aggrandisement, and this, together with a growing tendency towards intense jingoistic nationalism, has tended to make compromise too one-sided to be considered seriously as such

Indeed, the position has resolved itself into a matter of how far the policies and demands of such countries can be accepted without entering into a bondage as complete as though conquest was an

Thus it is that Franco can sink British ships engaged on their lawful business without eliciting a response stronger than a Note. Italy can wage war in Spain. Japan can invade China. Germany can expand her borders in Europe. These are flagrant acts of defiance and aggression which, if allowed to continue to their logical end, can result only in the virtual subjugation of other Powers.

Can Britain now afford to take a firmer stand? The answer will depend on events in the near future. Failing this, it is to be hoped that the demands of the truculent Powers will be reduced as their immediate objectives are attained. Such a policy of implied weakness is a heavy price to pay for peace, but, having paid it, we can only hope that the future will hold happier things.

INFLUENCE OF GERMANY AND THE SOVIET

Exclusive Air Mail News From Our London Correspondent

When the recent tension resulting from the first of the municipal elections in Czechoslovakia had eased, statements appeared in the Press which suggested that the attitude of Poland had decided the issue between peace and war. Germany, it is reported, had been deterred from attacking Czechoslovakia by the firm line taken by Colonel Beck, the Polish Foreign Minister, in an interview with the German Ambassador Herr von Moltke.

Though the reports were emphatically denied in Warsaw, where it was declared that no interview had taken place between Col. Beck and Geographically, Poland occupies the position of a second Belgium, and the Poles cannot easily forget that the struggle between Germany and Russia during the Great War was fought largely on Polish soil.

In a war between her two great neighbours, Poland could only be the loser and in consequence the neighbours, Poland could only be the loser, and in consequence, the principal object of her policy is to avoid the danger of being drawn into such a conflict. Hence her refusal to enter the "Eastern Locarno" proposed by M. Barthou, for under the proposed pact it would have been necessary for her to allow the right of passage through her

Dominion Newspapers Praised

Favourable comment on the number and quality of New Zealand newspapers was made by Dr. F. H. Spencer, former chief inspector of Species, former that hispector of schools in London, in the course of a recent interview in Auckland. "I have seen no signs of yellow journalism in this country," he said, "and I consider the service rendered by your newspapers to be really commendable, considering the relatively low circulations they possess."

Dr. Spencer also commented on the number of book shops in the Do-minion, which he declared to be exceptional in a country with a population of fewer than 2,000,000.

Minstrels Thanked

"I am directed to state that the council heartily thanks you and your members for your generous donation, which shows that the Minstrels are living up to their wonder large sums of money for public purposes," said the Napier Town Clerk (Mr F. A group of this type would be all too reminiscent of the Sudeten German party in Czechoslovakia. The million Germans living in Poland would represent a most important asset to Germany in the event of trouble developing in these two countries; so would the discontent of the six and a half million Ukranians with whom the Germans are known to have established contact.

Strategic Possibilities.

Even more important is the fact that Germany would be able to cut off the greater part of Poland's export trade, and to paralyse the centres of her heavy industry in Polish Upper Silesia. Sixty-five per cent. of Poland's foreign trade passes through the two ports of Danzig and Gydnia, and Germany, by blocking the Polish corridor, could effectively establish a blockade.

Critical

From Our Own Parliamentary Representative.

PARLT. BLDGS., June 29. What he described as "a slander on the youth of New Zealand", implying through the social security New Zealander was willing to de-pend upon the State for provision against old age, was vigorously replied to by Sir Alfred Ransom (Opp., Pahiatua) in the House of Representatives this afternoon.

"So far as the Pahiatua electorate was concerned the Prime Minister's recent visit was an out-and-out political campaign," Sir Alfred declared. "I am one of those who believe that the young New Zealander is not degenerate and yet all legislation is in the direction of implying that he is not as good to-day as the young New Zealander of 50 years ago.

I for one will not stand for that slander being put on the young people of this country and the young people themselves are not going to stand for the suggestion that they should spend all they earn and the Government will look after them."

Sir Alfred said that he regretted having to refer to what to his mind was a very serious statement in one of Mr Savage's speeches on the tour. It was that the Government's policy of cheap money had been of immense benefit to the farmers. Mr Savage had given a long list of the benefits derived through the various mortgage commissions and the court of review and he did not for a moment doubt that the figures quoted were correct.

Mr Savage had also said that the position," said Dr J. P. S. Jamieson, of Nelson, president of the New Zealand Branch of the British Medical Association, in an important statement issued to-day concerning the Social Security Bill which is to be submitted to Parliament.

Whatever the nature of the scheme, he said, it is obvious that its medical provisions cannot be carried out successfully without the co-operation of the medical profession, which is represented by the association.

The Government itself is fully aware of this, because on more than one occasion during the past 12 months, the Hon. Peter Fraser, Minister of Health, indicated to representatives c'the association that the co-operation of the profession was necessary and that the Government could not introduce any scheme which had not the support of a substantial proportion of the profession.

"So far the Bill has not come before Cabinet, even in a draft form," Mr Savage said, "and in these circumstances it is quite unreasonable for the British Medical Association of what may be incorporated in the Bill.

Imprest Supply Bill Debate

By Telegraph-Press Association.

PARLT. BLDGS., June 29.

The Imprest Supply Bill was introduced in the House to-day, the Prime Minister asking for urgency for the passing of the measure, which was granted. The Leader of the Opposition (the Hon. A. Hamilton) said that the debate on the Imprest Supply Bill was the preliminary skirmish, wherein the Opposition was seeking as much information from Ministers as possible, for use in the main debates during the session. The Bill was a money measure, and he considered that the public should be supplied with as much information as possible in these matters.

He thought that the Government in the past had tended to confuse issues in explanation of previous legislation, and he considered it advisable that when Ministers made statements on a Bill of this nature they should do so with as much clarity as possible, so that the public could be fully conversant with the facts. There was a tendency to cloud issues and leave the public somewhat bewildered concerning the true position of affairs.

Dealing with the national fin-

Dealing with the national finances, Mr Hamilton reiterated the criticism which he levelled in his recent broadcast address of the statement that New Zealand public debt had been reduced during the past two years. If the Government had been able to produce a surplus of £800,000 and reduce the national debt during the last financial year it was all to the good, but he would point out that the Government had borrowed pretty steadily during that time and personally he contended that the public debt had been increased.

EARNING POWER OF ASSETS

He knew, he said, that the public debt could be increased by the pur-chase of assets, but he would ask what was the earning power of those assets. The Government had borrowed a total of £7,492,000 and debt redemptions were somewhere about £2,000,000, leaving £5,468,000 additional national debt. Where did this seven millions of borrowed money come from he asked. It had money come from, he asked. It had not been borrowed from London, because no funds had been borrowed from that source since 1931, and he doubted if the Government would find funds available in the Old

Insurance Office.

Mr Hamilton also expressed the view that portion of the £7,000,000 of borrowed money had been spent on housing, and he urged that the Government should make it clear exactly what amount had been spent in this direction. He would also like to know where the £5,000,000 raised in unemployment taxation had been expended.

Mer Hamilton also expressed the 47,000,000 were starving in this country. Who, he asked, had dictated this policy of non-borrowing? Was it the British Government, the Bank of England or that mysterious coterie known as the City of London?

According to Opposition speakers, he said, New Zealand's debt was continuing to increase alarmingly, but he asserted that New Zealand's who he Empire, and must do her share to towards the defence of the Empire. No one wanted war, but the facts must be faced, and until the people of the countries had a say as to whether wars were to be fought or not protection had to be made against aggression.

Mr J. A. Lee said that all that was happening in New Zealand to-day was that the people had been provided with the wherewithal to purchase the goods they produced. Mr Hamilton had often accused the Government of spending too much money. He seemed to have forgotten that he had spent in one item alone £420,000 on the construction of a golf course in Mr Lee's own electorate. But when the Government spent money on developing ernment spent money on developing roads and expanding hydro-electric and other public utilities which could be real national assets, Mr Hamilton seemed to become con-

Hamilton, he said, had preached a doctrine of reduced costs. The Government had shown costs. The Government had shown through the use of modern machinery on public works, that it was possible to bring down costs without reducing wages. It had also reduced interest, which was another means of bringing about lower costs in industry. Mr Hamilton's alternative to this policy was to cut wages and lengthen hours.

By Telegraph-Press Association. PARLMT BLDGS., June 29. The debate on the Imprest Supply Bill was continued by Mr W. A. Referring to New Zealand's overseas credits. Mr Hamilton said that there had been a drop in these funds of £17,500,000 in the last two years. Of that sum only some £5,000,000 could be accounted for in oversea trade balances, and it was not to the Government's credit to have a surplus of only £7,000,000 in the last two have a surplus of only £7,000,000 in the Government's credit to have a surplus of only £7,000,000 were required for safety.

QUESTION OF REDUCTION OF COSTS IS DISCUSSED

"I Am Not Out To Make A Budget Speech," Says Prime Minister

By Telegraph-Press Association. PARLT. BLDGS., June 29.

Speaking of the Hon. A. Hamilton's speech in the Imprest Supply Bill debate, the Prime Minister (the Rt. Hon. M. J. Savage) said that apparently the Leader of the Opposition was concerned over the welfare of democracy. That was a new philosophy, coming from Mr Hamilton. There had been a time when a substantial portion of democracy was not allowed to participate in politics, and it was the action of the present Government that made it possible for them to enjoy civil rights. They could exercise those rights either for or against the present Government, but he thought it would be better for them to vote for the present Government than to vote for those who had cut their wages.

Mr Savage: All costs are someone else's income, and I want to know whose income you are going to cut.

Mr Savage said that he was not an advocate of spending money foolishly. He was advocating getting something for the money that was spent and the financial statements would show that the Government had got something for the money that had been spent.

Reverting to the question of interest rates, he said that the day of high interest rates had gone, and he accused the Opposition of being more concerned with big financial insulation of the Dominion in the event of another depression? He did not think the people of the country had fallen for this statement. He would also ask why the Prime Minister had not thrown more light on the question of socialisation. Mr Savage had stated that he was not going to socialise the farms, but socialisation of the Dominion in the event of another depression? SOCIALISATION OF FARMS

Mr. A. E. Jull Discusses Powers

In Dominion

"Mr Savage says he has been accused of wanting to socialise the farms. He asked, 'What would we do with the farms if we socialised them?'" said Mr A. E. Jull, National Party candidate for the Waipawa electorate, speaking to a large attendance of the Maraekakaho branch of the New intention to socialise farms, said It was notorious, said Mr Jull, Mr Jull.

of the main plank in the socialistic programme of 'socialising the income of production, distribution and exchange.'"

Perhaps Mr Savage was thinking that there were more ways of killing a cat than by choking it with butter.

The Minister of Finance (the Hon. W. Nash) had presided over the conference of the New Zealand Labour Party in 1936 after the electric programme of 'socialistic Australia. The producers had to pay, and they should be represented on the Arbitration Court, where these awards were being made. I see no other way of solving existing problems than that of a co-operative commonwealth." Was that not socialising the land? said Mr Jull.

The Minister of Lands (the Hon. F. Langstone) let himself go at the last Easter conference, said Mr Jull. Mr Langstone said, "the failure of land settlement in the past has been the granting of titles. . . . . What do they want titles for? Past history has shown that they want titles to gamble with—to get away with plunder. While I am Minister there is going to be no new opportunity given for anyone to do that."

Referring to the freezing workers, Mr Jull said that one of the companies gave their annual return to the Income Tax Department thic year, showing that ten beef butchers, was earned in twelve months an average of £626 per man without any overtime.

The average hours worked were under 36 per week. Two-thirds of the year was under the old award, but since December there had been an increase of 12½ per cent. Who paid? The producer, of course.

had been said that £500,000 was to be handed back to the farmers. The farmers were being bribed with their own money, said Mr Jull, and were having their own profits handed back to them.

Fundamentally, concluded Mr Jull, the issue before the electors at the next election was socialism or freedom.

As a mark of respect, business premises in the town closed while the cortege passed.

SPECTACULAR £2 RISE IN FAT CATTLE

Small Entry At Stortford Lodge SOUND SALE FOR BIG STORE

Fat Ewes Again in Over-Supply

A spectacular £2 rise in the price of fat cattle was the main feature of the weekly sale at Stortford Lodge yesterday. A much smaller entry was mainly responsible. Only one or two quotable lines of store cattle were forward in one of the smallest store cattle sales this winter.

Eleven thousand store sheep met with another very sound sale and prices remained firm. Fat ewes were again in over-supply in a smaller entry and prices showed little improvement on those of last week.

improvement on those of last week.

A big attendance of farmers followed the progress of the sale. In the store sheep, in particular, the attendance was the biggest for screeweeks.

STORE SHEEP

Store sheep met with another very sound sale. There was an entry of 11,000—the biggest so far this winter—and there was a buyer for everything. Small, backward lines of Southdown hoggets and undersized lines of wethers were all sought and there were very few pens of any sort passed throughout the day. A number of excellent lines of ewes were forward from various sources and these met with keen, and in one or two instances, spirited, competition. Wethers sold a line of 3 at 26/- to top the market.

Some of the sales were: On account of H. Tupaea (Opapa), 29 ewes for 16/4 to 17/-, wethers at 22/6; D. H. Elliot (Haumoana), 22 count of H. Tupaea (Opapa), 29 ewes for 18/- to 18/-; L. D. Interesting Day's Racing Promised

GOOD ENTRY LIST

The annual point - to - point meeting of the Hawke's Bay Hunt Club promises to be a particularly interesting fixture tomorrow. Held on the properties of Messrs O. Nelson, E. Nelson, and S. R. Beauchem, at Mangateretere, it should provide hunting enthusiasts with a particularly good day's sport.

A feature of to-morrow's fields from the aspect of racing followers is the presence of several well-known performers, who will be competing in preparation for more important engagements at the Hawke's portant engagements at the Hawke's Bay Hunt meeting on July 16.

Included in the Open Steeple-chase field is the Dannevirke winner, Tres Sec, who will be having his first start over country. Kikiroki, Sabatini and Harbour Bar, also engaged in this event are all roki, Sabatini and Harbour Bar, also engaged in this event are all carded to race in the Hawke's Bay Hunt Cup. In view of the recent good schooling displays of Kikiroki, his appearance to-morrow will attract attention. Salon, who is also to run in this race has been entered for the hunters' flat event at the Hunt Club meeting. A couple of years back this Leighton gelding gave a fair amount of promise.

Royal Toast Hilaria and Mandant

Royal Toast, Hilaria and Mandant are a trio in the Lightweight Steeple-chase who have been nominated for

The list of nominations is:-

HEAVYWEIGHT STEEPLE-CHASE, two and a half miles (all 13st).—Bowyang, Offer, Jack, Glentui, The Tramp.

OPEN POINT - TO - POINT STEEPLECHASE, two and a half miles (all 11st).—Sabatini, Harbour Bar, Salon, Kikiroki, Tres Sec.

Veteran Giving Trouble.

Black Duke is reported to be causing his owner a lot of trouble, and is a nuisance about the stables. Unless present plans are altered he has finished racing. His owner is in a quandary to know what to do with the gelding, for it is hardly possible to paddock him unless a fence as big as a castle is erected. Unless he settles down extreme measures may have to be taken.

Full Sister to Homer.

It is understood that the Wellington owner, Mr W. Higgins, who arrived in England to se the Derby, leased in Sydney a yearling filly by Iliad from Quadrilateral, which Mr K. Austin took to Sydney for the Easter sales. She will be trained by the former New Zealander, G. Price, at Randwick.

Although quite a few wellfancied horses have dropped out from the fields for the Welling. ton Steeplechase, Trentham Hurdles and Winter Hurdles, the acceptance list for these three major jumping events next week is still a good one. The South Island pair, Jolly Beggar and Nocturnus, are practically the only notable defections for the Wellington Steeplechase, although John Charles, whose connections have elected to tackle the hurdle events, is also rather a surprise absentee. A Quality Youngster.

No more impressive yearling has been seen on the Hastings tracks this season than the Australian-bred filly purchased by Mr Ralph Holden at the Sydney Easter Sales. At present being broken in, she was taken to the recovery for educational to the racecourse for educational purposes on Tuesday, and her qualpurposes on Tuesday, and her quality attracted considerable attention.
