FOOT ROT TREATMENT

Early Action is Essential For Both Sheep and Cattle

PARING OF HORN NECESSARY

(By Veterinarian)

To avoid the most serious trouble from foot rot, early attention to the condition is essential. In those cases of sheep and cattle which are infested with this disease generally all of them will recover if they are treated as soon as the disease is first noticed. It is not an exaggeration to say that almost every sheep and cattle owner who has a single case of foot rot should have a supply of treatment on hand for use in a similar outbreak.

It may be surprising to find that many people are not aware of the fact that foot rot is a bacterial disease and that it is not spread from one animal to another. It is a bacterial disease which is not spread from one animal to another. It is a bacterial disease which is not spread from one animal to another.
