FRANKLY, WHEN VAUXHALL TEN

was introduced as the car that would give "more than 45 miles per gallon" many people were sceptical.

Frankly, when Vauxhall Ten was introduced as the car that would give "more than 45 miles per gallon" many people were sceptical. Reasonably enough, because no 10 H.P. car had ever before given such petrol economy under ordinary conditions. So the claim was proved. It was proved in two test runs; one from Auckland to Wellington, the other from Christchurch to Invercargill. In both, the Vauxhall Ten averaged better than 45 miles per gallon. Both tests were made under the supervision of Automobile Association Officials; both tests were made with standard cars and under ordinary driving conditions. And now in the hands of owners everywhere better than 40 miles per gallon is the rule. So we say, "Ask the owner of any 10 H.P. if he gets 40 miles per gallon." We add to that, "Then ask a Vauxhall Ten owner."
