STATUTE OF MEMEL
BE KEY TO SITUATION

Mr Chamberlain Says That Berlin Has Been Urged To Respect The Convention

British Official Writes: RUGBY, Dec. 12.
The Prime Minister (Mr Neville Chamberlain), in the House of Commons, made a statement regarding the situation in Lithuania and Memel.

"His Majesty's Government, as a signatory of the Memel Convention, is doing its utmost in the present connection to bring into effect the Statute of Memel."

The official view of that signature of the Memel Convention is that it does not place an obligation on England and France to defend the Memel Statute, but it is claimed that they will be constrained by a definite act of aggression. The other signatories, Italy and Japan, were shown no interest in the Memel development.

A Berlin pamphlet official, commenting on Mr Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons, said that Germany had repeatedly declared that she would respect the Memel Statute.

TO YOUNG ROAD-USERS

This article is not only for grown-up people. It is addressed primarily to the young people of Hawke's Bay...

Everybody likes to walk the lovely streamlined cars... Everybody likes to walk the lovely streamlined cars...

In the schools and on the platforms all the country children have been warned about the dangers of frightfulness on the roads... In the schools and on the platforms all the country children have been warned about the dangers of frightfulness on the roads...

That is what makes it hard for the car driver sometimes to tell what to do. He has to make up his mind very quickly, but he is to be up against three other minds, and not only one so that it can be done in the time it takes them to help him avoid an accident.

Older people who have had accidents and who know how much damage can be done by a few moments of carelessness are naturally very cautious. This is particularly true when they are walking about in the towns or along the country roads.

Boys and girls, however, in the heat of a game or in the excitement of a race, are often not so careful. They are often in danger until some bright lights upon short and curved roads have been seen. This is particularly true when they are walking about in the towns or along the country roads.

Everyone has a responsibility for his own safety. And he has a responsibility for the safety of those around him. None of us knows what any one of his boys and girls will do.

When children lose their young lives or are maimed for life because of the careless conduct of a few seconds, no one can ever forget it.

Even the youngest must be taught that it is more or less necessary to be careful. It is necessary to be careful and more careful on the road.

The one thing that is most important to boys and girls today must be stamped upon their minds. It is that they must be careful.

SUMMER MEETING

WHAT DID WOODVILLE FORM REVEAL?

Seven Cup Candidates Raced THE BUZZER PLEASED HIS ARMY OF ADMIRERS

Padisah and Androon Well

(By MOTORS)

Was the Auckland Cup water-worn in action at Woodville last week-end? Seven Auckland Cup candidates were raced at the Woodville Jockey Club's summer meeting, and the Bolton Handicap...

Thurlewell was fortunate of the unlucky runners at the meeting, but neither day did the shape well enough to warrant taking any great notice of.

Padisah was certainly one of the better runners of the race. Padisah and Quodron were given five-pipe races over six furlongs, a distance which was not done there up to any great extent.

Padisah, whose preliminary card day extended over three weeks, did not seem to improve at all during the week-end, but behind the field into the straight, but Quodron was more impressive, for it was right up with the placed horses both days.

Padisah was well and Quodron spry and so well did he race, that he may be an even better proposition for the two-year-olds than either the Patisah or the Quodron, who continues up until the holiday.

THE BUZZER is best in any class of the cup that we have not met at present, and he has already proved his worth in the past. He is a very good runner, and he is a very good horse.
