WORK AT PORT IS RESUMED AFTER GOVERNMENT ACTION

Serious Loss to Fruitgrowers Averted: Trouble Began Ocer Men's Wages

Following intervention by the Government, the loading of fruit on the port wharves, which was delayed on Tuesday afternoon and yesterday through the refusal of the maritime workers to work, was recommenced at Napier last night.

The trouble originated through the loading of the English on Saturday being abandoned because of rain. The men who were engaged to load had claimed that they were entitled to be paid more than that received.

When Thursday a heavy swell prevented loading on the port wharves, and the men in two lighters had to be returned to the freezing works. The men refused to unload the next day, though under the question of pay for Saturday had been settled.

However, they returned to work at 3.45 p.m. and the unloading was completed by 8 p.m. Yesterday morning the men agreed to work until a settlement had been reached.

The meeting of the dispute committee was then held, but no agreement could be reached.

The following day the message was received from the Government, and the men resumed work, two gangs being employed in loading fruit last night.

No information could be gained last night as to whether the dispute had been settled, but it is stated that the men had been faced with a heavy swell, and the men were not available for work until 10 a.m. yesterday, when the unloading of the 25,000 cases could be loaded on the port wharves, only 1000 had been put on board.

An official communique states "A survey of the ground to be covered was made and the conversations will continue."

It is already apparent that both parties have decided to pursue a policy of good will. There is an atmosphere of cordiality here and interest is widespread.

From our own Correspondent

TAPPO, March 9.

The first structure on the first level under 12 miles' running from the town of Tappo, 7000 feet above sea level, suddenly collapsed when a heavy snow-squall very heavily with snow fell on the Tappo hills. The structure was a concrete and masonry one, but due to the heavy snow the structure collapsed, and the structure was completely blowing off.

The Tappo Public Department has been notified and has been notified that the structure was a concrete and masonry one, but due to the heavy snow the structure collapsed, and the structure was completely blowing off.

PROOF THAT WHITE KIWI ONCE LIVED

Woven Maori Mat Containing Feathers Still In Existence

Evidence that a white kiwi, one of the rarest of birds, probably lived within the last 20 years, is disclosed in the existence of a valuable Maori mat at present in the possession of a chieftain in the Mowea district between Havelock and Ross. The mat, which is used only for ceremonial occasions, contains the white kiwi feathers woven into the design.

The Maori mat was seen last week by the Bishop of Auckland (the Rt. Rev. F. A. Bennett), who told a reporter from the "Daily Mail" yesterday that he had found it of the existence of a white kiwi feather being seen. As far as he knew, not even Maori legend made reference to the existence of a white kiwi.

The specimen from which the feathers had been taken had been found in a deep near Teanaua probably 20 or 30 years ago, Bishop Bennett said. The kiwi had been found in the bush later, and there could be no doubt that the whiteness of the feathers made the find unique.

The white kiwi's claim to parity is supported by scientific authority, quoted by Bishop Bennett, which says an individual of a white kiwi feather being seen. The description of the New Zealand wattlebird, the kiwi's nearest relative, is that its usual color is brownish, slightly variegated.

THE SPREAD OF STIFFLEHEAD LEASE, ONE OF NEW ZEALAND'S LEADING STOCK MARKETS.—A general view of the Stifflehead Lease taken yesterday during the weekly market. Backing as one of the leading markets of New Zealand and extending to the North Island, great interest and important activities in this provincial stock exchange. In this photograph taken from near the refreshment rooms, the cattle pens are on the left, the sheep pens on the right, the foreground, while the fat sheep pens are on the far side of the parade.

"RECOVERED AT THE DOOR"—Two of thousands of sheep a season reach such and are handled in just such a method as this might be the "Dolly Head" yesterday at Stifflehead Lease.

WETTER BENEFITS NEW PROBLEMS AND ENTIRELY MAN-MADE—Groom with a horse and often with a blood-wind dog and horse play their part in the handling of stock. At every stock sale, the shepherd, his horse and dog are in the front. A snap at Stifflehead Lease yesterday.

"DID I HEAR A BIRD?"—More shows under the banner. Mr. S. L. Dixon, auctioneer for Williams and Beattie, Ltd., selling a lion yesterday.

"I'LL TAKE A PENNY, BUT GENTLEMEN, I AM UNHAPPY"—I thought these sheep would have made more!—The auctioneer Dixon's chief loss here this morning is the favour shown of the popular partners of the auctioneer. It is an historical selling method, and in the past, the auctioneer and auctioneer often showed. This is a method and Dixon is only caught at Stifflehead Lease yesterday. The auction is for a block of 1000 sheep.

THE WATCHERS—AND THE RIDERS—A typical view of the sheep section of yesterday's sale at Stifflehead Lease. A group of farmers beside the pens following the sale.

BRITAIN LAGGING IN COMMERCIAL PLANES

Committee of Inquiry Says It Views the Position With "Extreme Disquiet"

London, March 9. (P. M.)—The Civilian Committee has today published a report which shows that Britain is lagging behind other nations in the development of civil air transport. The report states that the Government has not done enough to encourage the development of civil air transport, and that the industry is in a state of "extreme disquiet".

UPROAR IN THE COMMONS

FOREIGN POLICY QUESTIONS—LIBERAL ATTACK

Were the Dominions Consulted?

London, March 9. (P. M.)—The House of Commons today witnessed a heated debate on the question of whether the Government had consulted the Dominions on foreign policy matters. The Liberal Party attacked the Government's handling of the situation, and the Conservative Party defended its actions.

The debate was led by Mr. MacDonald, who asked the Government whether it had consulted the Dominions on the question of the proposed extension of the Empire Air Mail Scheme. He stated that the Dominions had not been consulted, and that this was a serious breach of protocol.

The Government's response was given by Mr. Chamberlain, who stated that the Dominions had been consulted through the usual channels. He argued that the Government had acted in the best interests of the Empire, and that the Dominions would have supported the scheme if they had been consulted.

The debate continued for several hours, with both sides presenting strong arguments. The Liberal Party insisted that the Dominions should be consulted on all matters of importance, while the Conservative Party maintained that the Government had acted responsibly.

The debate concluded with a vote on the question of whether the Government should be censured for not consulting the Dominions. The Government was defeated, and Mr. Chamberlain's resignation was expected.

The debate also touched on other foreign policy issues, including the situation in the Middle East and the possibility of a new world conference. The Liberal Party called for a more active role for the Dominions in international affairs.
