FORCED LANDINGS CLASSIFIED

MR FRANCIS CHICHESTER DESCRIBES CRASHING FROM THE AUSTRALIAN ANGLE

Mr Francis Chichester, the New Zealand aviator, who won the prize for the first solo flight from England to New Zealand, describes his experience of crashing from the Australian angle.

Aviators recognize at least four types of forced landing, but Mr Chichester says that the most common is the one which occurs when the pilot is forced to land in a field or on a beach.

A BRITISH TRUMPET

The magnificent sound-breaking non-stop distance flight by British bombers from Ismailia, Daridna, a distance of 12,000 miles, to London, is a record which will stand for many years to come.

The flight was not heralded by any spectacular flourish of trumpets, but it was a triumph of the spirit which organized it.

Further, it was carried out for the most part in formation. Although one of the three machines was compelled to leave the formation on account of engine trouble, the R.A.F. machine, carried straight on and landed without any mishap, within five minutes of each other at their scheduled destination.

One is reminded of the famous flight over Everest, when the only acknowledgement of the finished journey was the clouds that swept to welcome the crew as they came in to land.

But it is something that strikes deep into the hearts of the British people, who have made it down as the best of the ordinary days of proving the course of science and the advancement of human progress.

As is inevitable, there has on this occasion arisen a cry of protest from those who are not in sympathy with the performance.

Such a cry is not new. It has risen from the West Indies, where it is a cry to point out that such the record of South America is a mere shadow of the great achievement of the Americans as now when the sphere of the war world.

But with a remark, or any other parallel, may be considered as missing the point of the great triumph.

It was not for the purpose of proving how quickly other parts of the world may be reached, but it was to show that it was to prove how far British determination to ensure peace and progress, and that it was to show the resolve of those parts of her Empire that may bring the world to a new era of peace and progress.

Every single step of scientific advance which brings the people of the world closer together, and which makes the dependence more of communication is a step in the direction of peace and progress.

The question need only be asked in a single way for its answer to be obvious. What is it that estranges people, that makes them enemies, that makes them fight, and that makes them die? It is the lack of understanding, and the lack of sympathy, and the lack of knowledge of each other's needs and desires.

It is detachment. It is mutual isolation because of distance, because of language, because of race and blood.

As a means of removing this detachment, and of making the world a single, united whole, it is that the world should be brought closer together, and that it should be made to understand each other's needs and desires.

Nothing can happen in the modern world which fails to affect the world as a whole. It is a world which is so small, and so close together, that it is impossible to be detached from it.

So it is with the present achievement. But so the steps of progress are being taken, and the world is being brought closer together, and the world is being made to understand each other's needs and desires.

It is a world which is so small, and so close together, that it is impossible to be detached from it.

It is a world which is so small, and so close together, that it is impossible to be detached from it.

A NEW HASTINGS CENTRAL SCHOOL

Latest Type Open-Air Buildings

SYMBOL OF THE PROGRESS OF EDUCATIONAL METHODS

Construction Work is Completed

New Zealand's most modern primary school building has been opened in the precincts of the Hastings Central School. It is signed on the most modern lines to provide the maximum of light and air for the children, it is typical of the progress that has been made in educational methods during the last few years.

The old school has to place in modern education, and the new building shows to what lengths the modern school has advanced with educationists to make the surroundings of the school as congenial as possible for the children.

Construction work on the building has been completed in the most satisfactory manner. There are no more fittings to add before the school can be officially opened.

No arrangements have yet been made for an official opening ceremony.

The Hastings Central school has been opened on the new site from a brick and concrete building which has been adapted to the requirements of the new scheme, which will be ready for occupation in a few weeks. The building is regarded by experts throughout the country as one of the best and most beautiful and best school buildings in New Zealand.

German Professor's Discovery

ADDRESS TO ROTARY

The evolution of radio was treated by Mr. H. Babington, a comprehensive and interesting address to the Hastings Rotary Club. The discoverer of wireless telegraphy, the late Marconi, was the subject of the address.

The speaker mentioned that when Marconi was a young man, he was a student at the University of Bologna. He was interested in the study of electricity, and he was particularly interested in the study of the electric arc.

Marconi was very late in being recognized with wireless telegraphy. It was not until he was 30 years of age that he was recognized as the discoverer of wireless telegraphy.

Marconi was a man of great energy and initiative. He was a man who was not content to wait for others to do his work for him. He was a man who was always looking for new ways to do things.
