IMPORT CONTROL

From the Government-to-day most admitted that the short on operation hastily as more or less of an emergency measure. The Minister of Finance, the Hon. Mr.
McCarty, at a conference of importers held in Wellington yesterday at which measures were primarily held in Wellington admitted that these measures were imposed chiefly to check the alarming fall in the value of the pound sterling.
The Minister of Finance, the Hon. Mr. McCarty, at a conference of importers held in Wellington yesterday at which measures were primarily held in Wellington admitted that these measures were imposed chiefly to check the alarming fall in the value of the pound sterling.

As a result, the money we received in London from the sale of our exports was soon spent in paying for our imported goods, and the Government was eventually faced with a position in which insufficient funds remained to meet the required payments of duties and interest on loans.

It must not be supposed that the difficulty in our sterling finances was a sudden development. Actually the deflating process has been going on for considerable time, and for the last two years it has been pointed out that unless the sterling was supported by a credit advance to the United Kingdom...

Undoubtedly, the Government chose to ignore the warning in the hope that a rise in export prices would be sufficient to meet the discrepancy. The rise in export prices eventually the Government, with all the symptoms of public impatience, and the Government was eventually faced with a position in which insufficient funds remained to meet the required payments of duties and interest on loans.

It is not surprising that the Government should have been misled by the apparent success of the import control regulations which were devised for the purpose of checking the fall in the value of the pound sterling.

Finally, the attempt to explain the whole thing away as a mere technicality, and to suggest that the Government was misled by the apparent success of the import control regulations which were devised for the purpose of checking the fall in the value of the pound sterling.

HAWKE'S BAY HORSES AT PIAHIATUA

Prospects For To-day's Races PLAY ON READS WELL IN THE CUP EVENT Dancer Expected From Winsome Lu

(By MOTOHA)

The inclusion of a number of Hawke's Bay horses will be much more interesting to the Pihiaiaia Racing Club meeting, which opens to-day, and it appears likely that the local representatives will give a good account of themselves.

The Cup field is a really good one, with last year's place-getters—Master Crichton, Lucania Lu, and Helen Ford—going to battle again, while the form in the past few weeks of Hunting Cat, Play On, Winsome Lu, Flammarion, Royal Robin, and Eastern warrants their consideration. The material in them for a loose run.

Other events on the programme have filled well and it is reported that the course is in good order after last week's racing.

Wagging will be the single cup winner and the day's racing opens with—
