"Time to Make Great Decision"

AN APPEAL TO ENGLAND

Further German Victims Likely, Mr Eden Warns

MUNICH A FAILURE

United Press Association—Copyright.
(Received March 16, 10.40 p.m.)
LONDON, March 16.
—There comes a time when a great nation must take a great decision. I believe that such a time has come now," said the former Foreign Secretary Mr Arthur Greenwood, commenting on speech during the debate in the House of Commons on the Central European situation.
Mr Greenwood said no one could doubt that there would only be a brief respite before further demands would be made by Germany and another victim was envisaged.

He appealed for the sticking of party differences in the face of external danger.
Some Government supporters expressed the reluctant and regretful opinion that the Munich policy had failed, but others declared that Mr Chamberlain's untiring efforts for peace and understanding.

Government will failure to sign with England resolutely. He said the British Government will not be so easily misled by Hitler's threats. He said the British Government will not be so easily misled by Hitler's threats. He said the British Government will not be so easily misled by Hitler's threats.
