Deadly Anti-Submarine Weapons Evolved

BRITAIN'S NAVAL ESTIMATES

Fleet Now Strong Enough To Oppose Any Challenge

SHIPS BEING BUILT

British Official Wireless. (Received March 17, 7 p.m.)
LONDON, March 17.
In the course of his speech introducing recent Navy Estimates in the House of Commons, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty, Mr. C. G. D. Leake, said...

It is, of course, true, that the scientific and technical progress in this respect," he said, "is not so rapid as our methods of detecting, hunting, and destroying submarines have been advanced than any others in the world."
He described a hunt for submerged submarines, whose positions were unknown, in which he himself had taken part...

Finally he drew attention to the success of the Nyon Patrol in the Mediterranean as proof that those in control of the sea are now able to do so.

Repeated attack from the air, the Admiralty's policy had been to concentrate in warships the most anti-aircraft gun possible—there are now an increase in the number of such guns of 75 per cent—and an attack on a ship bringing with anti-aircraft guns would be a very different matter from attacks on defenceless merchant shipping.

Moreover, this will not limit the number of anti-aircraft guns which can be carried on a ship. The use of a gun of increasing size is the use of a gun of decreasing range. The use of a gun of decreasing range is the use of a gun of decreasing accuracy. The use of a gun of decreasing accuracy is the use of a gun of decreasing effectiveness.

Mr. Leake said that the Navy had been able to meet the challenge of the air by the development of the anti-aircraft gun. He said that the Navy had been able to meet the challenge of the air by the development of the anti-aircraft gun.

PROBLEM OF THE MARRIED WOMAN TEACHER

Education Board Discusses A Live Issue APPROACH TO MINISTER

"Should the first duty of any married woman be to her husband and family, or has the same responsibility in looking after the home..."

A letter was read from the meeting from the Southland Education Board regarding the provisions of the Education Amendment Act, 1938, in connection with the employment of teachers and married women.

Mr. Medford was emphatic in his opinion that the existing law which allowed a married woman to teach and receive a salary which was a barrier to the younger women from their advancement, was wholly unjustified.

The various education boards should have discretionary powers in the appointment of such teachers, he said, to view a married woman as a teacher receiving the board's salary as a married woman should be a matter for the board to decide.

"I cannot see any good reason," the speaker said, "that it was at any time intended that a married woman should be employed as a teacher."

"I am married woman made a teacher," the speaker said, "is a matter which is a matter of fact, and it is not a matter of law."

"Considering that we were discussing the matter as a matter of fact, it is not a matter of law, and it is not a matter of fact, and it is not a matter of law."

"The Minister of Education," the speaker said, "is the only person who can give a decision on this matter."
