HERETAUNGA ST. HASTINGS

ON ONE SECOND SUNDAY OF MAY, shortly after the beginning of this new anniversary day, Miss Anne Jarvis placed a white carnation on the grave of her mother. Like most of the great reformers and founders, she was at first unaware of the significance of what she had done. For her it was an act of simple faith, an unselfconscious tribute to the love and devotion which her mother had shown for her during her life.

It was only later that she realised what she had done. Perhaps she mentioned the incident to others, who showed themselves impressed. Soon afterwards at last, she conceived the idea of setting aside a certain day in the year in which a tribute could be paid to all mothers.

The idea attracted at once. The girls in her Bible class spread the news of the new anniversary day to all their friends and acquaintances. They distributed carnations to the congregations of Philadelphia, for that was the home of Miss Jarvis. The idea took on the force and urgency of a new revelation. Through the Young Men's and Women's Christian Associations, Bible Classes and Sunday Schools, it spread faster than did the good news from Ghent. It crossed States and seas and continents.

The anniversary day which New Zealand will celebrate on Sunday has an international scope and the barriers of nations, states, religions and parties, to common joys and aspirations and a sense of the human oneness.

It is impossible still that the simple suggestion of a single woman should achieve a world significance. The day was not original. There were medieval English festivals in which sons and daughters gathered together to honour their mothers, and the Virgin Mother, who in her part of the world, and girls give gifts as a part of Mothering Sunday, the fourth in Lent, which was a day nearly hallowed elsewhere. Originally the girls were given to the mothers' shrines and white doves were laid upon the altars.

Century of Progression.
The religious ceremony, which has furnished material for the poets, the dramatists, the novelists, the historians, the philosophers, the scientists and the statesmen, has been the subject of many a book, or at least of many a lecture, and has been the subject of many a play. It is in fact, a day of the most important kind. It is a day of the most important kind. It is a day of the most important kind. It is a day of the most important kind. It is a day of the most important kind.

Gifts Did Not Finish.
The day was not finished by the simple act of placing a carnation on the grave of her mother. It was not finished by the simple act of placing a carnation on the grave of her mother. It was not finished by the simple act of placing a carnation on the grave of her mother.

With Love to Mother

Next Sunday is Mother's Day... the day of remembrance set aside for all Mothers.

Next Sunday Mother will smile happily and perhaps a tear will escape as she thinks of a tiny pink babe... fondled, cuddled, loved... you made that light spring up in her eyes!... and you still have the power to gladden her heart.

Show her your affection next Sunday by wearing a White Flower... give her a gift in token of your respect and devotion... Remembrance means thank you her!

WOMEN to-day have almost reached the fulcrum of the emancipation for which in the last 50 years they have fought so hard. They have farmers and their economic rights, the right to exert to the full their acquired civilisation.

In civil life they exert almost every industrial organisation, work in every sort of mill, in every sort of shop and office. They make farmers and professors—in the penetration of their scholarship rivaling the best that men have done.

They are doctors and scientists. In Parliament and out they speak with the force and confidence of men—and defeat them at the polls. What a contrast the modern woman with her mid-Victorian counterpart!

Mother's Day is on Sunday—it reminds us that motherhood is the greatest occupation of all.

What is the occasion of a man to get a gift for his wife? The question that occurs here is a matter of mere etiquette—then one a man's thought, but in practice, even in the most remote of villages she is a mother.

It is in these qualities which women, by their own nature, are so well fitted to be mothers. Their understanding is more motherly, their gentleness is more motherly, their gentleness is more motherly, their gentleness is more motherly.

Really this tea is good - excellent, in fact. I must remember the name ... LIPTON'S

SOME people drink their tea standing up—with a lot of tea, ready to dash out of the house a moment later. But this isn't the way to enjoy a cup of Lipton's tea. Lipton's, like most aromatics, has a delicate, certain reserved sweetness in character for more delicate palates. But in our kitchens and over the home or office, quiet for a moment from the day's bustle, slip a cup of Lipton's tea ... or serve Lipton's with the appropriate measure of brandy to accompany its vinous fragrance. These you'll rather love cherishing and savoring—being altogether delightful than this Certain tea.

GISBORNE RACES HOLD WIDE INTEREST

Strong Hawke's Bay Team

THE JUMPING TALENT IS GOOD

Peter Beckford Shows Promise

(By MOTUORA)

Only four of the 17 Hastings and Gisbornees horse owners have been able to deliver their engagements when this district will be a good one. On Saturday, the strong team of 17 horses, which has been put together to make its presence felt at Makaraka on Sunday and Monday, will be ready to start. It is a team that has been put together in the future, for apart from the strength of the local contingent, the inclusion of two North Auckland horses gives promise of keen sport. The field is usually good and the meeting should re-establish the Poverty Bay Turf Club in a sound position.

Beneficial for the light rain, wet, and the course proper at Makaraka is in wonderful order, and the weather seems to be 'set fair' for the weekend. It is little wonder, then, that racing enthusiasts are proposing making the trip through to Gisborne and Hawke's Bay to see the racing which will be won by a strong contingent of horses, but also by a large number of spectators.

HAWKES BAY stable will supply a good field of horses for the first time. The team will be made up of horses from the Hawke's Bay and Gisborne districts.
