SAILORS' HEROISM IN DISASTER

American Submarine Wreck

VICTIMS KEPT COOL AND CALM

Thirty-Three Men Rescued

United Press Association—Copyright. (Received May 25, 11.50 p.m.)

When the diving bell floated above the water in the Pacific's swiftness at 12.20 a.m., marking the rescue of the fourth contingent of those imprisoned in the sunken submarine, 20 hours had elapsed since the Spanish wreck. The divers planned to work all night in an effort to determine the exact location of the wreck...

When the survivors of the wreck were rescued, they were found to be in good condition, and it was ascertained by a number of reports...

The news of the rescue of the crew of the sunken submarine, the U.S.S. Squalus, was received here at the right moment...
