DANZIG NAZIS TOLD TO BE IN READINESS FOR DECISIVE STEPS

PRO-GERMAN BELIEF THAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE WILL NOT HELP THE POLES

OMINOUS NAZI TROOP MOVEMENTS ALARM EUROPE

LONDON, June 30. — (Received) that there will soon be a demonstration showing how little Britain and France are willing to support Polish armaments, says the authoritative Danzig journal "Vorgeschau," which urges the population to strengthen themselves in anticipation of the hour of decision. The paper adds that arms and strength will be particularly necessary in the next few weeks. "It is no longer to be doubted," despite Danzig's denials, that the Free Corps is being organized in Danzig, for which armaments are requisitioned, quantities of arms from stored, and lately requisitioned for rearmament," says an official communiqué from Warsaw.

The German troops have been transformed into a mobile force and are being sent to the Polish frontier. The Danzig press has reported that the German troops are being sent to the Polish frontier. DOCTRINE OF FORCE COMBINED

Straight-Forward Speech By The British Foreign Minister AGGRESSORS WARNED

British Official Views. (Received June 30, 7.30 p.m.)

A policy of nations could be built upon a world which lived in fear of violence and to spend the intelligence in preparing to resist it, said the Foreign Minister (Viscount Halifax), in a speech before the Royal Institute of International Affairs, which he discussed in detail a number of problems essential to the reconstruction of international order. It was later to try "Peace" where there was no peace, or to prevent to reach a settlement which it could be guaranteed by a reduction in military preparations and by the assured recognition of every nation's right to the free enjoyment of its independence, he said.

"At the moment the doctrine of force has been a doctrine of fear. It is the doctrine of a policy of nations which is based on the fact that the world is divided into two camps—the aggressors and the victims. HARDLY THE FAULT OF THE CAMERA

Cliff Ledwith's glasses have been broken by a lightning bolt which has struck the roof of his house... The film was well lit but was somewhat over-exposed in a few places... The camera operator was not to be blamed for the accident.

The haunting scene from "Pooh Bunch" depicts the authenticity with which the film, now at the State Theatre, brings to life the background of English country life.

Opening Of The Napier-Wairoa Line

The Realisation of the Cherished Dream of

PIONEER DAYS

TO-DAY, July 1, 1939, marks the official opening of the Napier-Wairoa section of the East Coast Railway Line. To commemorate an historic occasion, to pay a tribute to those who worked so hard that this mighty link in the development and progress of Hawke's Bay and the East Coast might be forged, the "Daily Mail" publishes this Souvenir Supplement.

THE STORY OF THE EAST COAST LINE TRIALS AND TRIBULATIONS OF THE PIONEERS

THE DEVELOPMENT OF TRANSPORT

Railways in New Zealand are today not only the most valuable property of the Government and the greater commercial business. They are the most useful means of providing settlement in the interior of the country and of maintaining trade communication and the movement of the people on business and pleasure. In no other country are railways so intimately bound up with the general development and progress of the land.

Population is distributed over such an extensive area and has expanded in so many directions because of the unusual contour of the islands, that numerous lines of rail have been necessary to link up the cities and towns and give the districts of which they are the business centres. And the completion of the Napier-Wairoa section on the East Coast and the South Island main line. This has been realised after almost half a century of agitation and hard work in the face of insuperable obstacles.

When Sir James Hector petitioned his public works policy in 1873, in outlining the benefits of railways, he included the opening of a railway line to the Bay of Plenty as one of the public works to be carried out by the Crown. It was not until 1880 that the Government decided to build a line from Napier to Wairoa. The project was approved by the House of Representatives in 1880. The line was to be built in stages, starting with the Napier-Wairoa section. The project was approved by the House of Representatives in 1880. Indomitable Will Made The Napier-Wairoa Line Possible

Today's inauguration of the rail service linking up Wairoa with Napier opens a new chapter in the history of Hawke's Bay.

The story of how the line was constructed is one of great hardships, great adventures, and one which thoroughly demonstrates the district's potentialities for the stout-hearted.

It is told of many hardships the work of constructing the line was first started, it took the mistakes were overcome, how towns and settlements grew, and how the people of the region and the leaders of the Dominion became alive to the fact that adequate means of transport were vitally necessary.

It has been said that exploration began when men found he could cross a stream on a floating log. For the savage in his "hugget" came and the passengers in the latest heavy line are relying upon the same principle—that certain materials will float in water. Of course, without this New Zealand could not have been settled by either white man or brown, but if learning to travel by water was one stage of civilisation, learning to use vehicles that run on wheels was certainly another, and a very important one.

For all his cleverness and advancement in many ways, the Maori had no wheels, while man to show him those, and how to utilize horses, bullocks, and engines to move the vehicles about.

In the roading difficulties between Napier and Wairoa were great, so was the courage of the settlers. But today, with good highways and an up-to-date rail service that will compare favourably with any in New Zealand, Wairoa is no longer isolated from the outside world.

Instead of all the tribulations and difficulties involved in the matter of transport to the North Island, the completion of the Napier-Wairoa section on the East Coast railway is one of the greatest.
