True, they're carefully washed, and they look white. But just try them against a white garment washed with Persil. What's the difference amazing. How can that be? It's simply that Persil's amazing-gladness get out every speck of dirt and every trace of stain. It's by washing things so much cleaner that Persil gets them whiter. By TELEGRAPH.—PARLIAMENT BLDGS., Sept. 5.

The House of Representatives met today for the first time since a state of war with Germany has been declared, to be satisfied there was a large attendance of members, and that they were ready to meet any emergency.

There was a dramatic silence immediately after the reading of the address in support of the Government. Mr. Fraser stated that, in view of the outbreak of war, there was a number of papers dealing with the present state of hostilities which he wished to lay on the table of the House. These included documents relating to the outbreak of war between Germany and Poland, also telegrams and other communications between the New Zealand Government and that of Great Britain relating to our own declaration of war with Germany.

Mr. Fraser then moved a formal resolution approving and commending the declaration of a state of war between New Zealand and Germany.

At the evening session, the M.P. for Hastings, Mr. J. H. McEwen, moved a resolution that the Government, as the Labour Government, should be held responsible for any possible difficulty of a shortage of essential supplies, and that the Government should take every possible step to avert the serious consequences.

He emphasized the vital necessity of the Government to take every possible step to avert the serious consequences of a shortage of essential supplies, and that the Government should take every possible step to avert the serious consequences.

Mr. McEwen also expressed the hope that the Government would take every possible step to avert the serious consequences of a shortage of essential supplies, and that the Government should take every possible step to avert the serious consequences.
