German - Russian Agreement

POLAND NOW PARTITIONED

Reasons For Continuing War Held To Be Ended

TREAT MADE OF COMBINED ACTION

Blame Will Thus Be Laid At The Door Of Britain And France

London Press Association—Copyright.
(Received September 30, 2 a.m.)

LONDON, Sept. 29.
A Berlin communique announces that the Moscow talks resulted in a definite settlement of the Polish affair.

It adds that the Russian and German Governments will now make a joint effort in co-operation with other friendly Powers to end the war between Britain and France and Germany. If their efforts are unsuccessful they will jointly consider necessary measures.

The communique is signed by M. Molotov and Herr von Ribbentrop.

It emphasizes that following Poland's liquidation, there is no necessity for continuing hostilities. If, however, Britain and France continue their demands for the return of Poland, as Russia and Germany will then consider the necessary steps.

The communique says that the Polish agreement is permanent. It denies the right to any third Power to interfere, and also announces that the Soviet has promised to supply Germany with all the necessary materials in exchange for German goods.

The communique says that the German and Soviet Governments consider that the Polish agreement is a sure basis for increasing friendly relations between the two peoples.

The Moscow radio says that the agreement provides that there shall be no interference from either side in adjusting territories under their control. In other words, the German part of Poland will be Nazi, and the Russian part Communist.

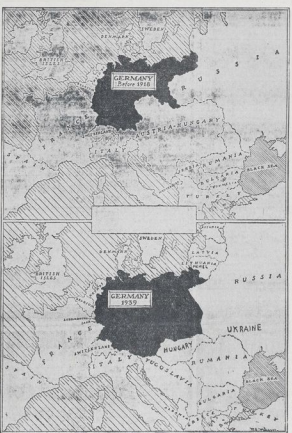

The German and Soviet Governments, having by an agreement signed a definitive settlement of the questions arising from the dissolution of the Polish State and having thus created a sure basis of durable eastern European peace, declare that it is their unanimous opinion that it would be in the best interests of all nations to end the state of war existing between Germany on the one hand and Britain and France on the other. The two Governments will therefore jointly make an effort at co-operation with other friendly Powers in order to attain this end as soon as possible.

"If these efforts do not succeed, the fact will then be proved that Britain and France are responsible for the continuation of the war."

"The war should be continued, high consultations will occur between the German and Soviet Governments on the subject of necessary measures."

"The German and Soviet Governments, after the discussion of the former Polish State, consider it their exclusive task to re-establish peace and order in those territories and areas the demarcation lines have drawn of a peaceful existence according to their particular aims."

The British United Press Paris correspondent authoritatively reports that Russian and German news agencies have announced that Russia and Germany will make a joint effort to the Allies, some time before long.

THE NEW FRONTIERS.—This map shows the position of the new international frontiers in Europe after the pact and under the "abandoned Treaty of Versailles" is "wholly represented." The new German-Russian frontier runs from the Baltic to the Black Sea, following the course of the River Danube in that portion of the Hungarian border which previously divided Rumania and Slovakia in the Carpathian basin.

TERMS OF THE PACT

The Capitulation Of Warsaw

Five Main Points

"They have been agreed to the following articles—"
"1. The German and Soviet Governments fix as the frontier of their respective territories in the former Polish territory the line marked on the attached document in a complementary report."
"2. The two parties recognize as the final frontier of their respective territories the line marked on the attached document in a complementary report."
"3. The two parties recognize as the final frontier of their respective territories the line marked on the attached document in a complementary report."
"4. The German and Soviet Governments undertake to supply Germany with all the necessary materials in exchange for German goods."
"5. The German and Soviet Governments consider that the Polish agreement is a sure basis for increasing friendly relations between the two peoples."

London Press Association—Copyright.
(Received September 29, 10.30 p.m.)

MOSCOW, Sept. 28.
The terms of the pact between Russia and Estonia are—

(1) The countries agree to assist each other in the event of direct aggression by any great European Power either in the Baltic or through Latvia.

(2) Russia undertakes to equip the Estonian Army.

(3) Estonia will allow Russia to maintain naval and air bases in the islands of Ood and Dagoo and in the town of Paldiski. The bases will remain Estonian territory.

(4) The countries agree to participate in any coalition against each other.

(5) The countries agree that the pact does not affect their sovereignty rights, economic systems, or nationalities.

(6) The pact will be effective within six days and will operate for 10 years.

A Stockholm message says it is understood that Russia has not ordered the evacuation of Estonian troops from the Baltic coast.

The King Agency announces that the Soviet Union and Estonia have signed a pact for mutual assistance. Estonia has decided to accept the Soviet Union's terms. The pact is said to be a joint effort to end the war between Britain and France and Germany.
