British Press Association—Copyright. (Received October 18, 11.45 p.m.)

LONDON, Oct. 18.

Germany's push inspired by Hitler's desire to eject the French from Poland, is now at a complete standstill. It is officially estimated that the Nazis have lost at least 5,000 men, which is out of all proportion to the slight gains. The French losses in the course of their valiant resistance to pre-arranged positions were slight.

Once the Nazis reached the first line of the French defenses they met a veritable wall of fire which almost completely stopped them.

Some official commentary says that the Nazis at no point succeeded in getting near enough to the trench ditches to establish hand-to-hand fighting. They were forced to dig in at the points where they had gained a few feet with a view to creating machine-gun nests, and they will be constantly subjected to a violent French artillery barrage and machine-gun fire.

The "New York Times" correspondents have estimated that the French have lost 5,000 men in the long fighting since the French broke through the line of German front-line positions which had been held for two weeks. The article came in the Washington Post.

It is believed that the French have lost 10,000 men in the long fighting since the French broke through the line of German front-line positions which had been held for two weeks. The article came in the Washington Post.

United Press Association—Copyright. (Received October 18, 7.20 p.m.)

A White Paper containing a final report by the British Ambassador (Sir Neville Henderson) on the circumstances leading to the termination of his mission to Berlin is published today. The document is of great present and historical value in exposing the wiles and evasions of the Ambassador on the events leading to the war and the impressions made on him by leading German personalities.

Dealing with the factors forcing the situation and leading directly to the outbreak of war, the Ambassador says: "The background to the events of August, 1939, was the occupation of Prague on March 15 of this year and the sudden destruction of the hard and noisy work of the day and independent people. This act by Hitler and his colleagues was a deliberate violation of the Munich agreement, which he signed not six months before."

RUSSIA AND TURKEY
The breakdown in the Moscow talks between the Turkish Foreign Minister and Soviet officials is not particularly unexpected in view of Turkey's repeated declaration of her intention to stand by the side of France.

The specific proposition put forward by the Kremlin has not yet been divulged, but unofficial reports may be fairly accurate in describing an intention whereby Turkey would close the Dardanelles to belligerent shipping and to warships of any nation with whom Russia might be at war, in return for guarantees of security. In addition, it is possible that the Soviet has been manoeuvring for position in the Balkan and Bosphorus areas much as she has done in the Baltic.

It is in view of Russia's policy, one inclines strongly to the belief that she is taking advantage of the complicated international position to achieve a diplomatic combination of strategic objectives. The Soviet-Japan pact commands the Gullfs of Persia and the Indian Ocean, and in a strategic combination from the Finns she may take command of the Gulf of Rumania.

Italy, too, may be attracted. A neutral Balkan position would prevent the status quo which would suit admirably, Italy would be free to make any strategic move which she might desire to employ in this direction. The Allies are not likely to be able to do this.
