DISASTROUS LOSS OF DUTCH LINER: 140 ARE MISSING
Ship Strikes Nazi Mine
In North Sea

WOMEN AND CHILDREN AMONG SURVIVORS
Two Terrific Explosions

United Press Amsterdam-Copyright. (Received November 19, 9:45 p.m.)
LONDON, Nov. 10. The biggest civil shipping disaster of the war occurred last night, when the Netherlands liner Simon Bolivar was sunk by a mine in the North Sea.

Most of the survivors were half dazed and had had to jump into the sea. They were suffering from shock and many were injured by the explosion.

It is believed that 280 passengers perished. Other reports state that the total complement was 400, which reduces the number lost to 140.

The complement were mostly Netherlands subjects, but there were some British and many women and children. The survivors included three babies under twelve months.

Women were among the survivors, and high schools were closed in London as a result of the disaster.
