Armed Enemy Raider Makes Its Appearance In The Tasman

Turakina Gunned While Crossing The Tasman On Tuesday

NAVAL AND AIR FORCES OUT AFTER THE ENEMY

News Suppressed To Increase The eastern town and causing some fatalities, is believed to have been Chances Of Success

By Telegraph—Press Association WELLINGTON, Aug. 22.

The Prime Minister (the Rt. Hon. P. Fraser) announced to-night that at 6.28 p.m. on Tuesday, August 20, the New Zealand naval authorities received a message by wireless from the s.s. Turakina, in the Tasman Sea, to the effect that she was being attacked and gunned by a raider and giving her latitude and longitude.

All possible steps to locate and deal with the raider were immediately taken by the New Zealand naval forces and the Royal New Zealand Air Force, and the search is continuing.

No further information is at present available. The Prime Minister explained that it had not been possible to make an earlier announcement on this matter owing to the necessity of preserving secrecy in order not to prejudice the effectiveness of the steps that are being taken.

In authoritative quarters it is believed that the agreement referred to was that relating to Canton and Enderbury islands, reached in 1938.

going to set up a regime for the use in common" of these islands. The arrangement was made for the purpose of international aviation and communications, and each party was to have equal facilities.

Only Civil Companies

The Notes on the details of the arrangement, which were exchanged by the two Governments on April 16, 1939, provided for joint American-British official control of the islands with a special ad hoc regime. Only civil transport companies incorporated in the United States and the Empire were to use the islands, and it was arranged that the United States should build an air base and that the British Empire should have the use of it. All the facilities publicly foreshadowed were, of course, civil.

This arrangement was for 50 years, with the possible that these facilities may be extended to other uses should the occasion arise.

DIPLOMAT'S REPORT

(United Press Association-Copyright.) (Received August 22, 9.5 p.m.)

LONDON, Aug. 22. "According to a neutral diplomat who has arrived from Paris," says the Lisbon correspondent of the London "Daily Telegraph," "Paris is an armed camp and the principal base for Hitler's projected assault against Britain.

"The Germans are maintaining strict secrecy to prevent the slightest detail of their preparations from leaking out. This is illustrated by their refusal to give visas to prominent Americans seeking to leave Paris for Switzerland.

"This diplomat described life in Paris as unpleasant. There was gunfire in the suburbs every night and the food situation was becoming worse every day.

"'My general impression,' he added, 'gained from conversations with Government officials, is that they realise that Britain alone can save France. The Germans are exercising the greatest pressure on the Vichy Government. Frenchmen are not allowed to leave the country without special authority from the Armistice Commission. Marshal Petain is trying to maintain the prestige of the Vichy Government. M. Laval's stocks have seemingly fallen since he went to Paris to see the German Ambassador.' "

WELL-DEFENDED TARGET

(British Official Wireless.) (Received August 22, 8.30 p.m.)

RUGBY, Aug. 22.

One of the targets receiving constant attention from R.A.F. bombers is the Dortmund-Ems Canal. This magnificent piece of engineering is the most important link in the German waterway system serving her industrial area. Stretching for many miles across the plain, the aqueduct joins one mountain ridge to another and thus enables barges to cross without the delay which would ensue if different levels had to be reached by a system of locks.

Linking the industrial valleys of the Ruhr and the Rhine with the Mittelland Canal, it completes the chain of waterways connecting the new industrial areas in east and central Germany with the old areas in the west and north-west.

In view of the unsatisfactory state of her railways, this canal system is of special importance to Germany Naturally, the Dortmund-Ems aqueducts are well defended and, because the target area is small and only susceptible to attack from a very limited number of directions it is comparatively easy to concentrate its defence.

The pilot who was awarded the V.C. for a successful attack on this important target described the defences as making a lane along the length of the canal, and the fact that two of the five bombers employed in one recent attack were down sufficiently indicates strength of its defences.

Thus a seaman visiting New Plymouth described an impression of a convoy in the English Channel, says the "Taranaki Daily News." To have any chance of success, he said, a bomber had to attack its victim from a fore and aft position. Should an attempt be made at right angles to the course of the ship, the chances of a hit were so negligible as to be discounted in practical naval or air warfare. Hence the huge kites, trailing 5000 feet overhead and directly astern of the vessels presented a very real obstacle to enemy dive bombers. They had proved a most effective counter to air attacks.

INGENUITY ON BOTH SIDES

Famous Crimes

A French detective put in charge f a case assumes entire responsibility for its solution, though the entire Department of Justice is behind him if he needs assistance. Anything he wants is his, from a laboratory to a regiment of soldiers.

Ultimate arrest of the criminal is taken for granted; it's the ingenuity displayed in achieving it that counts, writes Kingsley Gordon in a London journal. An impatient superior, asking how the case is progressing, will receive no enlightenment beyond a whispered "S-s-sh! I have an impart due!" important clue!

Any suggestion that Surete offi-cers excel those of our own Scot-land Yard is not intended. It can-not be denied, however, that French riminals possess a degree of origin-lity and intelligence seldom shown by British crooks.

Not the Horse The case of the death of Baron Zeidler illustrates this. The baron's body was found in the stable in which he kept a high-spirited hunter. On his skull were horseshoe prints. Obviously the horse had killed him

On his skull were horseshoe proviously the horse had killed him—rather too obviously, in fact!

The famous Bertillon caught the murderer within a few hours. Bertillon saw the hoofprints on Zeidler's skull, but he observed that, if the horse had inflicted them, the baron must have been standing on his head at the moment of impact. The criminal had fastened the horseshoes to a club—but he'd fixed them upside down!

The famous Bertillon caught the murderer within a few hours. Bertillon societies to ascertain their views on the question of approaching the Government to have live-hare coursing banned was unanimously carried at a meeting of the Cruelty to Animals Prevention Society.

It was further decided to gather relevant evidence upon the onduct of the Dunedin club's June meeting for submission for a legal opinion on the advisability of prosecution on the French detectives kept a jump ahead of the crooks by discovering that no two human ears are exactly alike! Once in possession of a clear photograph showing the ears of a wanted man, they generally get him.

Rene Leduc, an absconding bank clerk, was tall, fat, with bulging eyes and bushy black hair. While in hiding he starved himself to become thin, shaved some of his hair and dyed the rest grey, "doctored" his eyes until they became small and rheumy, puffed out his nose with paraffin injections and walked with a stoop and a cane.

How To Knit For Men Overseas

MAKE A SLEEVELESS PULLOVER FOR MEN ON ACTIVE SERVICE

Men on active service whether in the Army, Navy, or Air Force, will all appreciate a sleeveless pullover. This is an especially good design, the instructions for which have been issued by the Air Force Relations Committee.

Take 6oz. four-ply, 1 pr. 10, 1pr. 8 needles; 36in. chest. Tension 6 stitches to one inch.

Front: Cast on 100 sts. on No. 10 needles and rib K2 P2 for 3½in. Change to No. 8 needles and continue in stocking-st. till the work measures 13in. Start the armhole border by knitting 12 sts. at each side in garter stitch for 4 rows. Shape the armhole by casting off 6 sts. at each side. Then, keeping a border of 6 sts. in garter stitch, decrease 4 times at each side alternate rows. You now have 80 stitches. Commence the neck by knitting the 12 centre stitches in garter st. for 4 rows. Divide for neck opening. There is now a border of garter st. on each side and on the neck edge of 6 sts. Shape neck by knitting together the 2 sts. next to the border 12 times every 4th row. You now have 28 sts. Continue till armhole measures 9in. Beginning at armhole edge, shape shoulder by casting off, in plain rows 8, then 7, then 7 again, equals 22 stitches. Continue on the 6 neck border sts. for 2in., cast off. Make the back the same as the front, omitting neck

To Make Up: Join shoulder and side seams, join neck border and attach to the neck edge of the back.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 23, 1940.

BRITISH CONFIDENCE

There are no braggart threatenings or sabre-rattling posturings in the high and noble tribute paid by the British Air Minister (Sir Archibald Sinclair) to the young men of the Royal Air Force whose gallant deeds have thrilled the world. Rising, roaring, rushing like a tide, gay go the fliers to the fight, the bravest of the brave, our living bulwark between a life of freedom and a despotism which seeks to whip us, like coward slaves, to the dungeon of defeat and despair. Our airmen are not only in the news. They are the news of the day. And no apology is needed to defend the instinctive urge to cheer them from the ground as they soar aloft on their magnificent crusading exploits.

These young men are fired by no lust of conquest or domination for its own sake. Their hearts are aflame with the consecrated will to stand between their native lands and destruction. They have been touched by the live coal from off the altar of freedom and have made of themselves living sacrifices in a sacred cause. And they are winning. To use their own picturesque phrase, "their tails are up." It is as true in war time as at any other time that nothing succeeds like success. The score-board since August 8 reads: "German losses 701 aircraft, British losses 192." These figures can be believed, for the British method of computation has erred on the conservative side if at all. As the Minister pointed out, the British gains are calculated on the basis of enemy machines certainly destroyed, probably destroyed, or damaged. The figures quoted refer only to those certainly destroyed and it is reckoned that the combined total in the other two categories will be found to be greater when the sum is finally worked out.

It is becoming more evident every day that the men bred under the democratic system are of a superior type to those whose natural instincts are thwarted and stunted by the fiats of totalitarian dictators. "We shall win the war," said the Minister, "because we mean to show that a democracy can be as swift and formidable in action as a dictatorship." Had it been sheer weight of numbers that is the deciding factor in any kind of fighting, we would have been beaten to our knees long ago. Had the two countries been living under a totalitarian regime, Germany would now be on top of the world. The difference is in the stuff of which our men are made. It is a difference of individuality and initiative as against a uniform type of human fighting machines. It is the difference between "ought" and "must." The Germans fight because they must, the British because they have an ethical obligation so to do-not a command given from above, but an impulse from the bottom of their hearts.

The equally fine tribute paid by Sir Archibald Sinclair to the workers who must perforce stay on the ground to produce and to service the British armada of the skies is also appreciated by every true Briton in the Empire. We hear of no disputes or hold-ups in that all-important task. What the Minister described as "vigilance, energy, and the sacrifice of convenience and even of rights and liberties" already characterise the "all-in" endeavour of the men and women who have made it their business to put solid British workmanship into everything that comes under their hands. The hall-mark of British efficiency is on every unit of the air arm, either on the ground or in the air. There are some in this Dominion who will hurriedly skip such references, and they are the very people who should take them most to heart.

We are a long way from the scene of danger, but we are in its zone just the same. The British example should be a continual inspiration to us all to count nothing of the cost but to give all that we can in effort and in achievement for the realisation of the great ends for which the British people

WELLINGTON, Aug. 22.

"I refuse to believe that the resolution in question represents the views of the railway workers concerned," stated the Rt. Hon. P. Fraser, referring to an Auckland message (published below) reporting a resolution of the Otahuhu branch of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants.

"It appears," Mr Fraser added, "to be simply an attempt by a small group of irresponsibles, or worse, to drive a wedge in the Labour movement as well as to divide the country's united war effort, and as such, it is not entitled to serious consideration. The Labour Government, representing hundreds of thousands of voters, is closer in touch with the mass of the working people than is a small group concerned mainly with raising difficulties during the war period and endeavouring by distortion and misrepresentation to corrupt the public mind and delude unthinking people, most of whom are anxious to serve their country to the fullest extent."

The previous message referred to above stated:—
Criticisms of the Government and demands for sweeping changes in policy were included in a motion passed at a special meeting of the Otahuhu branch of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants. The resolution is as follows:—
"That the Otahuhu branch, representing 1000 railwaymen, records the opinion that the Government's present administration is not in the interests of the workers of New Zealand. We therefore demand:

Concern at the effect on the industrial life of the community of the recent further reductions in petrol allocations for commercial purposes was expressed at the monthly meeting of the council of the Wellington Manufacturers' Association.

Speakers who had pleaded for an offensive spirit, said the Minister, were forcing an already open door. The War Office had just as much offensive spirit as had the R.A.F.

Substantial progress was being made with the Empire air training scheme. They had expected to reach a certain figure of pilot production from Canada in July or August next, but they were now going to get that figure by April. By now, they should have had in full operation five schools in France. One of the first things he did was to make preliminary arrangements for the starting of schools in North Africa, starting of schools in North Africa, and the cociety had had quite a successful Year

The society had had quite a successful year the credit for which should go almost entirely to the branches, which did the real work of the society up and down the country, said the president (Mr F. Campbell) moving the adoption of the annual treport. The year had shown a further increase of 700 in cases. Some new cases had been discovered, and that number was steadily growing. That seemed to prove that in the early days of the society the discovery of cases had not been anything like complete. The appointment of welfare officers had been most helpful. They gave service to the criptular and the content of the society and had quite a successful Year

Those were now the main functions of the society.

Mock Warfare Which May Become Grim Reality At Any Moment

ENGLAND, July 20.

Wild raspberries are ripe on the Downs this week-end; and from the brow of the rise where we rested in mid-afternoon we could see six or eight parties of pickers: women and children, and one old man leaning on his stick. We could see the sea, too, the English Channel with the wind blowing in fresh from France-or what was France. The sort of wind that brought William of Normandy when Harold's men awaited him on this same coast; the sort of wind, with a slightly different set, which filled the billowing sails of the Great Armada; a wind for which Napoleon waited weeks in vain. And between yesterday and to-morrow, so some folk say, another would-be invader will try; for the moon is to be full to-night, or as near it as makes no difference, and the tides are right.

Up there this afternoon we were preparing for war in a solitude of peace. It was hard to imagine invasion nearer than the Normans, of whose occupation, and that of the Romans eleven hundred years before them, we could see traces through our glasses. After nearly twenty centuries the footprints of Caesar's legions remain part of England: part of the peaceful pattern of green woods and colouring corn spread at our feet when we turned to look back the way we had come. As sunshine chased shadow from field to coppice and out again, loitering a moment yonder by the grey stone wall behind the church tower, we sat silent, until the corporal, impressed but hungry, remarked that it was an emphatically long time since half-past six breakfast, and we had better push on. Whereupon the driver spoke to Margaret, who, tossing a lively head, swung about on her tracks and clattered off along the ridge.

Tourney For Patriotic Funds Last Night

Twenty bouts of bright boxing provided thrills for a crowd of about 1000 who attended a tournament staged by trainers and jockeys at the racecourse tea kiosk, Hastings, last night. All seating and standing room was occupied when the bouts began, and many were unable to gain admission.

The boxing was of a high standard and some of the bouts had the crowd in a frenzy of excitement. The performers were well known figures of the turf, and there was no lack of enthusiasm among the spectators of enthusiasm among the spectators as they cheered their favourites to victory. Congratulations to the promoters were extended by the Mayor of Hastings (Mr G. A. Maddison) in a brief address before the tournament

Patriotic funds will benefit to a considerable extent as a result of the tournament.

People may take metals direct to the depot, if they wish, stated Mr Maddison. At the depot the metals will be sorted, and when enough material is on hand it will be loaded on to a railway truck and sent to Wellington.

One bulletin deals with general organisation and the other gives directions for the collection of nonferrous metals. Subsequent bulletins will deal with the saving and collection of paper, rags, and bags. In the meantime the public is being informed that these materials will be required and should be saved and sorted.

Metals Wanted

The non-ferrous metals which are wanted are aluminium, brass, bronze gunmetal, copper, copper wire, foil, lead metal tubes and zinc. Metals that are not yet wanted for collection are scrap iron and steel of all kinds, chassis of motor cars, old number plates, tins and corrugated and galvanised iron.

"Here is a tangible way in which the people of Hastings can help the war effort," he said. There was no lack of excitement in the second round, both men alternative taking the offensive. The bout finished with them exchanging blow for blow, and the crowd calling for

RELAXATION OF PETROL RESTRICTIONS URGED

Price In Hawke's Bay Should Also Be Considerably Reduced

The petrol situation was discussed at length and in great detail at the monthly meeting of the Automobile Association (Hawke's Bay) held in Napier on Wednesday night.

Particular reference was made to the small amount of petrol being allowed to motorists, and the high price charged in Hawke's Bay, taking into consideration the fact that Napier is now a main tanker port.

It was unanimously resolved that remits be presented at the annual conference of the Automobile Associations of New Zealand to be held in Auckland next week, emphasising the seriousness of the position, and pressing for action to be taken in an endeavour to obtain an increase in the monthly allowances to all classes of motorists.

MEMBERS WHO LACK NO RISK IN CLIMBING. FOR LECTURE AUDIENCE

Address By New Zealander Who Has Tackled Unconquered Mount Everest

"There's no great risk about mountain climbing—apart from the danger of avalanches," commented Mr L. V. Bryant at the outset of his lantern lecture on an expedition to Mount Everest. The audience which witnessed the remarkable series of slides displayed, and which followed on the screen the journey of the handful of climbers across Tibetan wastes into the heart of the Himalayas and up the slopes of Everest itself, must surely have held another opinion.

Mr Bryant was well qualified to discuss his subject, for he was a member of the fifth expedition to tackle the world's highest peak, and possesses the unique distinction of being the only New Zealander to make the attempt. Back from the hazardous trip, he has brought a remarkable series of scenes, and now that the period of copyright has expired, he can unfold a story paralleled only in the annals of other

Everest attempts.

It was reported that the Wednesday morning practices were being maintained, but the absence of senior players from these practices was very noticeable. The keenness of those who do attend is evident, but their efforts towards combination are hampered by the absence of a few.

A letter was received from the Napier Ex-High Club inviting two of the club's teams to play friendly matches on the Marine Parade courts on Tuesday evening next. It was decided to accept the invitation, and any players of the senior A1 and A2 teams who would be unable to go would be replaced by other members.

The teams for Saturday's games were decided upon as under:

Mr Bryant, who is staying with
during his visit to Hastings, has enlisted and is waiting to be called up.

The other afternoon a well-dressed dame entered the "smoker" of an Auckland tram. The only vacant seat was next to a working man who was puffing clouds of smoke from a foul briar. He chanced to be the only smoker present. The lady glanced with disgust at her neighbour. "My good man," said she at last, "do you know pipe smoking always makes me ill? "Do it, now, mum?" queried "the good man," "then you take my tip an' knock it orf!" Everybody laughed—bar the lady. Well, the smoke of some tobaccos would make anybody feel "ill." Excess of nicotine in the leaf. Bad stuff to smoke. Plays up with heart and nerves. National Tobacco Company's goods don't do that. They are all toasted. That destroys the nicotine and renders them harmless. The ced with disgust at her neighbour. "My good man," said she at last, "do you know pipe smoking always of living for days at a time in a tent four feet high by four broad, in company with men who "snore too much, or not enough," Such conditions, together with the effect of the excessive altitudes, tended to physical and mental deterioration.

Describing the process of acclimatisation, which all who hope to survive at such great heights must undergo, Mr Bryant said that vomiting, severe illness and lassitude were often brought on by the rarefied air. Men would camp at a reasonable level, and travel daily for a few hours at the height at which the trouble was manifest; in this way the symptoms would gradually wear off. He himself had suffered to a great extent from the sickness.

Everybody laughed—bar the lady. Well, the smoke of some tobaccos would make anybody feel "ill." Excess of nicotine in the leaf. Bad stuff to smoke. Plays up with heart and nerves. National Tobacco Company's goods don't do that. They are all toasted. That destroys the nicotine and renders them harmless. The company are the pioneers of the tobacco industry in N.Z. COMBINED HUNT CLUBS ANNUAL RACE MEETING ANNUAL RACE MEETING

ANCES for all first day's events are due TO-NIGHT (Friday), August 23, at 9 pm. C. B. WEBSTER,

CURRENT COMMENT

The biggest money winner at Addington last week was the South Canterbury trainer R. W. Townley, who with Dusky Sound won £850. C. S. Donald's good little mare Marlene won £700 and Lady Milne won £650 for her owner W. O. Smith. M. C. McTigue's only stake winner was Great Divide, whose consistency earned him £535. The stakes at the meeting were well distributed between North and South Island owners.

It is difficult to gauge the value of a racehorse or a brood mare. The price paid for Perditta II was £900. She produced winners of £71,082, and one in Diamond Jubilee II sold at 30,000 guineas and money could not buy Persimmon, who won £34, 712 in stakes, and was one of the most successful sires of his day.

Mrs Macdonald Buchanan, who is sending Coronach to New Zealand "on loan," is credited with owning and breeding one of the best six two-year-olds that raced in England this season. This is the colt Owen Tudor, who is sired by Hyperion from Mary Tudor II, by Yutol, so should stay. Mologaro, by Felicitation (son of Colorado, sire of Ringmaster) whose dam is the grey mare, Moti Begum, by The Tetrarch, is looked upon as the pick of the colts that raced, while the late Sir Abe Bailey's unnamed chestnut colt, by Coronach from Miss Americus, is also highly regarded.

Zest and Liberation ran four furlongs in 55. Valtour and Vacation were well clear of Hoapai in 54.4-5. Vacation hit out well.

Rocks Ahead is in foal to Sandy dale and will visit him again. One of the most promising young pacers in Southland is a colt by Sandydale from Marian Drive.

The committe of the Canterbury Jockey Club has decided to leave the stakes and conditions of the New Zealand Cup the same as last year. The prize will be £2000, including a gold cup, valued at £75. The com-mittee reserves the right, however, to modify these conditions in any way, if circumstances warrant such action, on account of the war conditions. Entries will close on Friday, Steptember 6.

After some disappointing form on the flat, it is intended to try Settle-ment over hurdles, and C. Emerson will make an early start with his education. Spartan is another Christchurch horse for whom a similar programme is in view. T. H. Gillett will give him some schooling very

EMBARRASSED SOLDIER In the emergency soldiers' hospi-

Being possessed with a good sense of humour, he exclaimed: "Boys, I am a daddy." Unortunately, his comrades believed im and told the nurse, who in turn informed the sister. The latter congratulated the embarrassed soldier, out worse was to follow.
