FRENCH UNDISMAYED BY NEWS

New Defences Believed To Have Been Perfected

United Press Association—Copyright. (Received June 7, 0.15 a.m.)

LONDON, June 6. While the storm rages on the great northern battlefront, Parisians are carrying on calmly. The London "Daily Telegraph's" Paris correspondent says that hundreds of people sat outside the cafes this afternoon enjoying the sunshine and undismayed by the news of the new great German offensive on the Somme and the Aisne. The Frenchman in the street believes that General Weygand has succeeded in organising deep defences in the interval between the first offensive and the latest attack.

The entire right wing of the German Army began a violent offensive against the main French defensive positions on the Somme and the Aisne at dawn yesterday on a front

Sir Victor Warrender, Parliamen-

RUGBY, June 5.

The French day communique states that the battle which had raged all yesterday was resumed at dawn to-day. The enemy pressure was particularly marked to the south of the lower Somme, where a slight withdrawal of the advanced elements occurred. "On the whole, we maintained our positions on the rest of the front attacked," adds the communique.

A report received in Paris says that the Germans hold three bridge head south of the Somme.

Another Paris communique says: "All information received from the front since the early hours of Wednesday shows that a new battle has begun. The violent enemy effort is directed so far on the line between the sea and the Laon-Soissons road."

The front, as given by the French official spokesman, extends from the sea along the Somme through Abbe-

West of there it runs to the Laon-Soissons road. This front, with its several road extends for a distance of 120 lines in the hills and woods were intact.

The Germans launched their attack at 4 a.m. with artillery and dive bombers, after which masses of infantry began to move forward.

Front of 120 Miles

"The Germans launched an attack at dawn on a front of over 120 miles," said the French military spokesman. "The main directions taken and the strongest part of the thrust were on the middle of the Somme (the region where the Germans had retained the bridgehead on the south bank) and east of the Oise—namely, on the Ailette river canal, below the famous Chemin des

"The Germans," he added, "at 4 a.m. opened very violent artillery fire, while dive bombers in great numbers attacked the French lines. After that, masses of infantry immediately began to move forward.

After that, masses of infantry immediately began to move forward, but no tanks were used.

Unofficial reports reaching Paris state that the entire right wing of the German Army has opened an attack and that the German columns near Laon are doing their utmost to force a passage of the Oise Valley and thrust to Paris. Nearly 1000 dive-bombers are covering attacks by enormous masses of infantry.

Entry Divisions Forty Divisiens

Military experts in Paris estimate that the Germans have massed 40 divisions along the Somme, plus the five mechanised divisions remaining out of the ten which started the Battle of Flanders.

Another source gives the German force engaged at over half a million, and says that the offensive evidently represents the second phase of Hitler's execution of the Schlif-fen Plan, which provides for a sweep by the right flank through the Lowlands in order to envelop

The French Prime Minister (M. Reynaud) told the Military Commission of the Chamber of Deputies that there were reasons for a more favourable issue in the present battle.

The Paris radio, in a message to the troops, said: "Hold on! It can be deduced from the rapidity of the new offensive he has launched that Hitler cannot allow his troops breathing space because, in order to achieve victory, he must wage a short war. Therefore we must hold

British Troops

A British spokesman stated that British troops were fighting with the French in the new Battle of the Somme. Some armoured vehicles had appeared on both sides of Amiens, he added, but there was nothing to suggest an armoured attack. The Allies were holding on solidly.

RUGBY, June 6. From shortly before midnight on Tuesday until the early hours of Wednesday morning strong forces of bombers ranged over north-west Germany setting oil and storage plants ablaze and wrecking rail communications at numerous centres from Dortmund in the north to Mannheim in the south. At Frankfurt a large oil-storage depot was systematically bombed by relays of aircraft for nearly one and a half hours. Over 400 high-explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped on this target and at the height of the attack the glow from the mass of flames enveloping the oil tanks lit up the river for many miles and plainly illuminated aircraft flying at 5000 feet above the target area.

An isolated group of tanks was seen to explode after two direct hits by salvos of heavy bombs. The streaming oil ignited bombs. The streaming oil ignited by the incendiary bombs was scat-tered all over the target, which quickly became a mass of raging fires, reddening the night sky and being visible to aircraft crews flying more than 100 miles away from the scene of the vast conflagration.

Railway communications over a wide area of Germany were also successfully attacked and extensive damage was caused to the tracks and rolling stock. Power Line Struck Important marshaling yards near Essen, Dusseldorf and Wesel were heavily bombed. At Cologne 70 high-explosive and incendiary bombs were seen to burst over the greater part of a railway yard crowded with goods wagons. A direct hit with a heavy-calibre bomb on the rail track at Honburg, near Frankfurt, caused numerous minor explosions and a vivid display of green flashes as though an electric power line had been struck.

Intense opposition from gun batteries and searchlights was encountered in many parts of Germany throughout the night, and several of the R.A.F aircraft suffered minor damage. All but one returned safely to their bases.

French Operations A French Air Ministry communique issued to-night states:
"The activity of our air force has been particularly intensive to-day. Our bombers attacked military jectives at Mannheim, Ulm, Lud-wigschafen, and Munich. The Bad-esch anilin factory was set on fire. The flames, which attained a great height, were clearly visible from the French frontier. Once again a Bavarian aero-engine factory in the vicinity of Munich was bombed. "Our night bombers also violent-ly attacked objectives of great im-portance in the region of St. Quen-tin, Peronne, and Cambrai. A rail-way station and several convoys were wiped out, roads cut, and com-munications were completely destroyed. Enemy Harassed

War means many different things to the people in the far corners of the British Empire. To the darkskinned and unlettered British subjects in Africa's vast interior, it is often a very perplexing affair indeed, and one that calls for explanation. Craine, of Cheltenham, his 11 ewes averaging £12 2/6. Mr J. Callesen, of Longburn, also had 10 excellent ewes in the consignment, and in the past his sheep have sold well at Albury. Considering the quality of these sheep, they must have been excellent buying at the average of £8/2/9.

Rams At 71 Guineas Two Romney Marsh rams from Mr L. N. Hoggard, Greytown, sold to 71 guineas, and two rams from Mr H. J. Rayner, Masterton, at 25

Border Leicester ewes are evidently in great demand, Mr P. Campbell, of Wyndham, selling 20 ewes to average £12/9/5, with 13 guineas top price, while Mr J. A. Edwards' ewes from Gore sold up to 16 guineas, with an average of £10/17/5.

Southdown ewes met a steady trade, Mr John Brooks, Irwell, selling at up to 8 guineas, with an average of £8/2/9; Mr A. C. Vile, Marton, averaged £7/9/8; the Canterbury (N.Z.) Here again, the three rams shipped did not realise prices in ac-cordance with the ewes, which is, perhaps, accounted for by the time of the year. Those sold on account of the Canterbury (N.Z.) Seed Company made 15 and 14 guineas.

Corriedales Too Fine financial position, the future of which cannot be gauged.

The Australian contract with the British Government has the advantage of providing for the sale of the clip during the currency of the war and one clip thereafter. That postwar period supplies time for readjustment in financial and trading circumstances.

Corriedales Too Fine Corriedales Too Fine Corriedales are reported to be much too fine, so it appears that the really strong woolled sheep of this breed is required. Mr J. H. Patterson, of Mayfield, had an excellent sale, his top price for ewes being 20 guineas, with an average of £10/17/10. Mr Hugh Ensor, Rakahuri, also had a satisfactory sale, his ewes averaging £8/15/· and rams from this breeder and from Mr O. T. Evans, Taruna, averaged 23 guineas.

Starring Role For John Garfield

"They Made Me a Criminal," which opens at the Regent Theatre, Napier, to-morrow, is a tense and exciting drama with a prize-ring background that co-stars John Garfield and the "Dead End" kids in a cast that also includes Claude Rains, Gloria Dickson, May Robson and Ann Sheridan.

Aside from its merits as entertainment, "They Made Me a Criminal," is noteworthy because it is the follow-up of Garfield, young newcomer from the New York stage, to his sensational screen debut in "Four Daughters." It is the answer of the Warner studio to the insistent public demand that the brilliant young actor be raised to stardom im-

ROBERT TAYLOR IN "A

YANK AT OXFORD"

Brilliant Success, With "Longest Night"

Adventure And Romance Blended

There is singularly fine entertainment promised in "Tower of London," which offers a spectacular example of Hollywood versatility. It will open to-morrow at the Regent Theatre, Hastings. The traditions of England are brilliantly emphasised by Basil Rathbone as Richard III. His consummate villainy, achieved with the delicate artistry which makes him one of the screen's most accomplished stars, has never been presented to better effect.

Boris Karloff appears as Mord, the grim club-footed executioner, in one of the most realistic performances of his career. Barbara O'Neil is an appealing Queen Elyzabeth and Ian Hunter draws a dramatic characterisation of Edward IV. An able supporting cast includes Vincent Price.

Robert Taylor's great success, "A Yank at Oxford," is the first feature on to-night's programme at the Municipal Theatre, Hastings. With the star in the title role, Maureen O'Sullivan appears opposite.

Star athlete of a small midwestern American College, Lee Sheridan is awarded a scholarship to Cardinal College, Oxford. Cocky and self-assured, he sets out to show the British what is what. In England en route to Oxford by train, Lee's open boasting of his athletic prowess inspires Paul Beaumont, an undergraduate, and his friends to stage a fake reception on the American's arrival. The net result is that Lee antagonises the Dean and endangers a new found friendship with Paul's sister, Molly Beaumont, owing to his lack of appreciation of the joke on him. Feeling that Oxford is against him from the start, Lee decides to return ing that Oxford is against him from the start, Lee decides to return home. He is dissuaded by Scatters, his scout, and next day surprises. Beaumont and his friends by winning a freshman's race with his cap and gown on. From then on, in a series of events both amusing and dramatic, he justifies his position in the university. "The Longest Night," the second feature was adapted from the Cortland Fitzsimmons mystery thriller, "Whispering Window," and teams for the second time Robert Young and Florence Rice. Young appears as Charley Phelps, heir to the Phelps Department Store, where practically all of the action of the practically all of the action of the story takes place. Florence Rice is a salesgirl in the store. Her sister is played by Julie Haydon. Miss Haydon's sweetheart is Leslie Fenton member of a gang of warehouse robbers headed by the department store's buyer (Paul Stanton). THE QUEEN ORDERS HER SKIRTS TO BE AN INCH SHORTER

But She Still Considers Knee-Lengths Are Unbecoming

The Queen, voted by Paris experts to be one of the bestdressed women in the world, has ordered her new spring costumes and day dresses with the skirts an inch shorter than usual

By doing this she is settling the fashion discrepancy among the dressmakers—some favouring knee-length skirts, some semi-short, some semi-long.

The Queen will still have her skirts long enough to fall five inches below the knee when she is seated. She has described the brief knee-length skirts some dressmakers are

FRIDAY, JUNE 7, 1940.

A CALL TO ARMS

These words are addressed directly to the youth of New Zealand:

Of what significance to you is the fateful news that is coming from overseas? And what are you going to do about it? Speaking as a veteran of the last war, and addressing the graduates of Canterbury University College on May 3, Mr A. T. Donnelly, among other things, said:

"After the last war, we blamed our elders as wellmeaning people who had made a mess of the world in which we had to live. You no doubt say the same about us. See to it, if you can, that your successors do not say the same about you." The present time is the flood-tide of opportunity for all who are fit to take up arms in defence of their country. Taken at full flood, that tide will lead forward to victory. Neglected, it will end in a tragedy wherein life is stranded in shallows and in miseries.

There is no reason why the youth of to-day should be bewildered or at a loss as to the causes of the war that is now scarring the fair face of Europe with smoke and flame. Philosophical musings upon what ought to happen or what should not have happened will get no one anywhere. The ghastly horror is upon us, and it is a young man's game. As the same speaker said: "If the war is lost we are saved all planning, all philosophical reflection, for our future policy and terms of existence will be prescribed by those who conquer us." It is hard to believe that, without putting forth the utmost effort and by refusing the necessary sacrifice, the youth of our land will be prepared to raise their hands in meek surrender to an inhuman enemy.

The forerunners who came a hundred years ago to these islands and who, by the sweat of their brows made homes for themselves and their children and for all who come after them, have handed on a heritage, intangible but real, of more than material advantage. It is a heritage of the spirit of the indomitable will to endure hardships and to conquer difficulties. Have the youth of our country become so soft and supine that they no longer take pride in that heritage? Our little island story is one of the most impressive in history. In the face of great natural odds marvellous things were done by the pioneers. Can it be that anyone with youth and health can turn away from the contemplation of such noble endeavour to take refuge in slothful inactivity?

We deserve to lose what we have if we are not prepared, in the face of arrogant aggression, to fight for it. It is the privilege of the youth of to-day to take the helm. The future is theirs. The destiny of the Dominion is in their keeping. They are the wardens of To-morrow. Those who come after will seek to know the reason why, if without the most sacrificial effort, the Dominion is allowed to go under.

It is all out of proportion that the urgings to national service on the part of youth should come from those older in years. In such circumstances as confront us now, youth should be clamouring at the gates of opportunity and insisting upon its right and duty to go out to do battle in the common

There can be no half-measures for the youthful spirit keen to serve. As a solemn recognition of the immense debt of gratitude owing for all that has been done for them by others to preserve the freedom they enjoy, they should throw everything into the fight for its further and lasting preservation. Even now, hundreds of thousands of hard-pressed, weary men are standing between them and the loss of all that we hold most precious. Is it fair to leave the whole of the burden to others in that way?

Many of our boys have gone, or are going to the battle. All honour to them. This appeal is made to those who have not yet seen the true extent of their duty.

BRITAIN NEEDS MORE MEN

For Temporary Service

By Telegraph—Press Association WELLINGTON, June 6.

At the request of the British Admiralty an appeal is being made for a limited number of men for temporary service for the duration of the war as officers of the R.N.V.R. Service will be overseas with ships of the Imperial naval forces, and not in New Zealand.

There are two distinct schemes. One is limited to men of from 30 to 40 years of age, who will be commissioned as probationary temporary sub-lieutenants and be confirmed in rank after three months' service. They can then be considered for promotion to the rank of temporary lieutenant if Candidates must hold a New Zealand certificate of competency as master of a pleasure yacht in New Zealand waters or a British Board of Trade yachtmaster's coastal certificate, or produce satisfactory proof that they possess an equivalent knowledge of navigation.

The other scheme is open to men between 20 and 30 with preference to men from 20 to 25. These will be enrolled as ordinary seamen with a view to promotion to officer's rank. After a course of preliminary training in England they will serve at sea for three months and will then be considered for promotion to the rank of probationary temporary sub-lieutenant. If selected, they will undergo further training, and if they pass the course they will be granted temporary commissions.

If not selected for a commission, they must serve for the remainder of the war as lower deck ratings. Young Havelock North Branch Of Red Cross Society

FIRST ANNUAL MEETING

The wide range of activity covered by the Havelock North sub-centre of the New Zealand Red Cross Society since its inception in November last year was well illustrated in the report of the chairman (Dr. K. E. Crompton) at the annual meeting last night. Outlining briefly the formation of the sub-centre, the report stated that as a result of an intensive house-to-house canvass over a period of three weeks a membership of 374 was enrolled. "This entailed much hard work," the report adds, "and reflects great credit on the committee. It was the basis of sound organisation in the sub-centre. 'Mrs A. R. Greenwood, the convener of the sewing committee, arranged for a depot to be opened monthly for distributing wool and materials and for receiving completed garments. The building will comprise two wings with a connecting entrance hall. It will be of wood and single-storey. In one wing will be a six-bed ward, a two-bed ward and three single rooms for patients. There will also be a dispensary, consulting room, laboratories and other offices. In the other wing will be bedrooms for orderlies, sitting room, dining room, kitchen and offices.

FINAL TRIALS AT MANY USELESS HORSES IN WORK

Drastic Culling Advisable

OWNERS SHOULD CUT THEIR INITIAL LOSSES

Sound Breeding Is Essential

(By MOTUROA.)

It is no exaggeration to say that the majority of the maidens seen in action last week-end at Greenmeadows look like being a continual expense to their owners. In fact, the maidens in the Bay at present, taken by and large, could do with a drastic culling at the close of the season.

With a few exceptions, maidens can be summed up fairly safely in their first few races if they have been given a chance to develop. Not all come to hand at once, but it cannot be denied that some in this class have raced all through the season showing little more than a bit of pace on the tracks, or speed for a few furlongs in a race. There are even maidens who raced last season, too.

It is not as though good class horses cannot be bought at a reasonable figure. The Yearling Sales may be a gamble, but it cannot be denied that a would-be owner can secure the first essential of a payable galloper—good breeding—at quite a low figure. All well-bred horses are not good gallopers, we all know, but the odds are much more in the favour of the buyer who chooses stock from the established studs, for most breeders concentrate on winning lines. Trainers would be doing a good service both to themselves and to their patrons if they were less inclined to hang on to worthless stock. Nothing discourages a new owner more than to be paying out continually for training and travelling, and for investments on their fond hopes without a return. Again, trainers would have less trouble with defaulting owners if they realised their duty to point out to their patrons that a wiser course would be to jettison the poor class horses to take a further chance in the bloodstock market.

Racing would be better for the public, too, if the plethora of poor class horses did not clutter up our race-tracks and our races. It should be the endeavour of all to encourage the improvement of the standard of the thoroughbred and that will not be accomplished by giving too much time to unpromising maidens.

(By MOTUROA)

It is a great pity that Tide has been been a handful, but a course of racing over hurdles should act as a corrective measure to this Tidal mare, who has the pace to win good races.

mare, who has the pace to win good races.

Tide has only recently taken on hurdling and her displays have been most impressive. She set the ball rolling with an excellent second to that promising jumper Kaiwaka at Awapuni last month and, improved by that outing, Tide won decisively from that good hurdling mare Queen's Dream at Napier on Monday.

Built on generous lines and possessing good bone, Tide is the right type for jumping. She was bred at the Flaxmere Stud, being by the Frenchbred horse Tidal from Sally Horn, an unraced mare by Cape Horn from Sarah Grand (dam of a good jumper in Manifesto), by All Black from Heavenly Twin, by Castor from the Musket mare Vivandiere, dam of the New Zealand Cup winner Canteen and ancestress of a smart hurdler in Erebus.

Tide is a young mare, being only a five-year-old, so it will usrprise if she does not go a long way in the jumping game.

INDIAN SUN NEEDS MORE TIME

Bred On Good Staying Lines

(By MOTUROA)

One of the most disappointing horses in commission is Indian Sun, but, while he looks bright enough, he does not seem to be carrying the solid condition necessary to stand up to hard racing and that is probably the cause of his two mediocre displays at the Napier Park meeting.

Indian Sun is one of the tallest three-year-olds in the district and his chances of success are not improved by the fact that he is not a good actioned galloper. However, like his half-brother, that good handicap horse Solarium, Indian Sun leaves the impression that he will improve with age and something of his real ability may be seen twelve months hence.

By the Karamu Stud sire Bulandshar, Indian Sun is bred from Sunbar, an Australian-bred mare by the Flying Fox horse Cooltrim from Sibar, by Bardolph from The Siren, by The Vice-Admiral from The Charmer, by Henchman from the imported mare The Witch.
