BRITISH HEROISM IN BATTLE THE SEINE

Troops Forced To Swim River Under Heavy Fire

WOUNDED FERRIED ACROSS IN SMALL BOATS

Heavy Machine-Gun Fire Mows Down The Advancing Germans

> United Press Association-Copyright. (Received June 13, 10.10 p.m.)

LONDON, June 13.

An official observer with the British Expeditionary Force in France says: "British units are taking their share in combating the German advanced forces which have crossed the Seine. During the last stages of the action whereby the Germans crossed the river, some of our detachments swam from the north bank to the south bank under heavy fire. Officers and men also took boats loaded to the gunwale with wounded across the river, using only a piece of wood as a paddle. The wounded were carried ashore while shells shrieked overhead from German batteries which were hurried to the north bank.

"Bombing and low-diving machine-gun attacks increased the hazards of this passage across the river.

"There were many acts of individual heroism during this bold rearguard action against the advancing Germans, even after mined bridges had been blown up.

"The Germans at one point drove a herd of cattle before them in order to conceal their approach.

"The Germans suffered heavily in all these actions, our heavy machinegun fire being particularly effective. A company of the London Machine-Gun Battalion alone fired no fewer than 28,000 rounds during one attack, in which wave after wave of German infantry were mowed down under ceaseless fire.

On the Marne

The French air communique says: "Our Air Force in the last 24 hours has continued its magnificent efforts in the great battle. Our heavy and light bombers operated day and night against the immediate rear of the enemy, considerably embarrassing his movements.

"We attacked numerous convoys and assemblies of troops with bombs. Our heavy bombers deeply penetrated enemy territory and bombed military objectives, including factories and railways. Groups of our fighters carried out many protective flights and fought numerous combats against a numerically superior enemy.

The German High Command, in a \mid of Paris. Enemy advance guards special bulletin, says: "The French force which we surrounded at St. of Crepy-en-Valois and Betz. Valery has capitulated. Our prisoners here exceed 20,000, including one French corps commander, one Brit-Valery has capitulated. Our prisoners here exceed 20,000, including one French corps commander, one British and four French divisional commanders."

The French Wednesday night communique says: "The battle continues with the same violence on the whole front. Between the sea and the Oise, the enemy has accentuated his efforts on the Seine from Rouen to Vernon, attempting to extend a bridgehead he has succeeded in establishing southward of the river.

"He is seeking to push to Evreux 40 miles due south of Rouen, and also Pacy-sur-Eure, 15 miles east of Evreux, but we are vigorously holding him. The enemy has also launched reconnaissance detachments on the north bank of the Seine in the direction of Caudebec, which is between Rouen and Le Havre. On the lower Oise, the enemy made contact with our forces in the region of Persane and Beaumont, just under 20 miles north

"The German smoke screens which are being blown over Paris from the battlefields might be described as one of Hitler's secret weapons," says the "News-Chronicle's" correspondent. "They have caused in Paris an artificial fog so thick that people were forced to use hand torches at midday. The effect is different from an ordinary smoke screen and produces an evenly distributed, lead-coloured fog smelling slightly of sulphur and incense. It cuts off vision for a few hundred yards to a height of several thousand feet and leaves a black soot deposit.

MANY LATER SORTIES

United Press Association-Copyright. (Received June 13, 9.45 p.m.)

LONDON, June 13. The R.A.F. made a spectacular bombing raid lasting 10 minutes on enemy concentrations on the Lower Seine, south-east of Rouen, yesterday. This was followed by further sorties later in the day.

The bomber force, after attacking enemy concentrations in the forest at La Mare and setting the woods on fire with incendiary bombs, were themselves attacked by a greatly superior number of Messerschmitt fighters.

which attacked simultaneously from astern, above and below. One Messerschmitt was almost immediately shot down in flames by a burst of fire from a British observer's gun, which tore chunks of metal out of the fighter's wingroots, and a few minutes later a second Messerschmitt 109, caught at close range by a bomber's air gunner, was sent plunging down trailing a cloud of black smoke.

was sent plunging down trailing a cloud of black smoke.

Another bomber, with six Messer-schmitt 109's on its tail, dived for cover into a cloud. On coming out it narrowly missed a head-on collision with the leader of the enemy's formation, which it had been evading. The lighter, apparently shaken by his narrow escape, did not pursue the engagement.

High-explosive and incendiary bombs, says a supplementary British Official Wireless message, were shot off and the engine was dissipation.

THE CAPTAIN WHO DIED WITH THE RAWALPINDI

Greatest Hero Of 1939 Had An Interesting Link With The Dominion

Detailing the careers of four candidates for the honour "Hero of the Year," the English news magazine "News Review" names Acting-Flight Lieutenant K. C. Doran, Stefan Starzynski, Mayor of Warsaw, Rear-Admiral Sir Henry Harwood, commander of H.M.S. Exeter in the battle with the Graf Spee, and Captain E. C. Kennedy, master of the Rawalpindi, sunk after a gallant fight with the pocket battleship Deutschland. The last-named has an interesting link with the Dominion in that, in the last war, he commanded the battleship New Zealand.

The greatest hero of 1939 earned his undying fame in the icy sub-Arctic waters of the North Atlantic, says "News Review." He was Captain Edward Coverly Kennedy, 60-yearold commander of the British auxiliary merchant cruiser Rawalpindi.

The full story behind Captain then came back one day like a dog With two tails."

Kennedy entered the Navy in 1892 and saw his first active service as a midshipman on the China Station during the Boxer Rebellion. He rose to be commander of the battle cruiser New Zealand in the Great War, but bad luck dogged him. Stricken with appendicitis, he was put into hospital, and while he was there the Battle of Jutland occurred. He earned a reputation as one of the best executive officers of the war, and at the end was in command of the light cruiser Cassandra. Then another piece of ill-luck befell him.

Canning Industry Expands

REDUCED IMPORTS

HAMPERING FACTORS

Last year's report of the Depart ment of Industries and Commerce stated that the Import Regulations had brought to the fruit-preserving and jam-making industries a con siderable measure of relief from for eign competition, and statistics showed a considerable rise in the value of its output in 1937-38, states the "New Zealand Herald." Seeing that at the end of last calendar year the industry employed 100 more people than it did 12 months previously, it is evident that the expansion has continued.

The import of canned fruit in 1939 was valued at £155,155, against £217,731 in the previous year, and that of jams and preserves fell from £17,614 to £3481. Certain dried fruits and pickles and sauces also showed reduced import figures.

Discussing the question of further expansion of the industry, in which is included the canning of vegetables, a businessman with opportables. tunity to make a wide but disinterested survey said that, while it was obvious that factories would seize every opportunity presented by the situation, there were limiting fac ors not realised by the man in the

It was an undisputed fact, he con-inued, that the countries where continued, that the countries where consumption per head of canned fruits and vegetables was highest were those which had long winters. New Zealand was blessed with a general climate and a range of climates which gave a very long production season for many vegetables—peas and tomatoes, for instance—and in consequence the average consumption of canned foods of the kind was lower than in countries not so tion of canned foods of the kind was lower than in countries not so favoured by nature. Further, conditions of life in New Zealand made the home kitchen garden a source of large supply, which also had an important bearing on the question. Organising the Market.

Again, there was the question of the organisation of some departments of the canning industry to ensure supplies at times when the re-tail market offered prices far be-yond the capacity of canners to pay. He foresaw the widening of a sys-tem under which contract arrangements are made between factories and growers to obviate slack periods on the canning side owing to the price lures of the retail market. At the present time, he continued, canners, seeking opportunity to expand their operations, had to consider more than the points he had mentioned and the relation between cost and demand. The supply and cost of tinplate were under the un-known influences of war and this of the industry. One mentioned the possibility of using glass jars instead of tins. The reply was that the use of glass containers would render idle exist-

BORIS KARLOFF'S FINEST ROLE

Mord The Executioner In "Tower Of London"

One man at least remains un-horrified by the shuddery shadows Boris Karloff has brought to the screen during his 20 years in pic-

That hard-shelled holdout is Kar off himself.
Boris is, however, reported to have succumbed to the teeth-chattering potentialities of his latest role, that of "Mord," the executioner, in Universal's "Tower of London." The 15th century drama will open to-morrow at the Regent Theatre, Na-pier, with Karloff acting as chief y of Richard III, a part played by sil Rathbone.

The story follows the shrewd darng of Richard, who loves Anne leville, wife of Wales, impersonaed by Rose Hobart. He kills Wales in battle and wins a bride, with the crafty connivance of Mord, the reking Edward IV, portrayed by Hunter, dies and his son succeeds him, with Richard as his protector. But Elyzabeth, fearful of Richard's treachery, robs the treasury to aid the exiled Tudor, played by Ralph Forbes. His army marches on England and in the desperate battle that follows, Richard is carried from the action on his shield. ction on his shield.

The story reveals a curious beauty of chivalry and courage, mingled with the cruel greed of human nature, which is equally ageless. It is entertainment of a high order. The characters belong to the past but their qualities are as modern as the latest news bulletins.

Impressive sets duplicate the grandeur of 15th century London and the magnificence of court pageantry. Elaborate costumes of the period add to the spectacular effect and hundreds of extras appear in their crested armour for battle scenes. Current Attraction

How To Knit For Men Overseas

FOLLOW THESE INSTRUCTIONS FOR SOCKS AND SPIRAL STOCKINGS

Last week we gave the first of the series of "Daily Mail" special knitting patterns for men in the forces. It is most necessary that women should keep on knitting, and this week we give you two more designs.

The first of these is an excellent plain sock pattern simple enough for a very average knitter to tackle.

By special request we give the design for spiral stocking. The naval authorities have issued an S O S for the spirally knitted sea-boot stocking, saying that it is far the best design because it has no fixed heel, the sailor can pull the sock round when a hole comes, and, moreover, they stay up.

at the ceremony, which was fully choral. Mr C. B. Spinney presided at the organ and played the wedding marches and the hymns, "Lead Us Heavenly Father" as the bride entered the church and, "Come Gracious Spirit, Heavenly Dove." While the register was being signed the choir sang an anthem.

The bride was escorted by her father, and wore a simple but lovely wedding gown of ivory slipper satin featuring a low neckline which was finished with a soft frilling of handmade carrick macross lace. The waitting was pented back and front waistline was pointed back and front and the swing skirt had pleated full-ness at the back, which fell into a train. The sleeves, pointed over the hands, fastened with tiny butthe names, lastened with this but-tions. Her lovely embroidered veil, lent by a friend, was held in place with two white doves mounted on a spray of orange blossom and her only ornament was her mother's gold locket and chain. She carried a bouquet of white nerines, carnations, sweet peas and cyclamen. Two 'maids attended the bride, Miss Barbara Weaver (chief), the bride's sister, and Miss Zella Meads, the bridegroom's sister. The Mayoress also spoke of a mannequin parade to be held in Hastings on July 26. She said that this was sponsored by the New Zealand Wool Council, who would show about 60 articles of apparel all made from New Zealand wool. The parade would be held in different parts of New Zealand, all the funds being given to the patriotic society in the district where shown.

Delightful musical items were very greatly enjoyed. Mrs C. B. Spinney sang "Homing" and an Irish lullaby "Husheen," both of which were heartily applauded. Miss McHutchon accompanied her.

Talk Given To Wairoa Club

A RECENT TOUR

"Daily Mail" Special Service. WAIROA.

A good attendance of members was present at the monthly meeting of the Wairoa branch of the Young Farmers' Club on Wednesday even-

Advice was received from the Gis borne club that they would be sending a team to Wairoa shortly to participate in the inter-club debate.

It was decided to combine with the Athletic Football Club and the Wairoa County Collie Club to hold a farewell for the members of the Third Echelon leaving Wairoa.

Mr J. M. Taylor gave an interesting talk on his recent tour with a party of farmers, of the Waikato, Rotorua and Bay of Plenty districts. The progress of the pumice lands astounded the party and, according to Mr Taylor, it proved beyond a doubt the value of top dressing. The speaker gave figures showing the total cost of bringing various farms into production and the amount spent yearly in artificial manuring. Figures were also available to show the amount of increased production as a result.

An All-Round Increase In Council Fees

BURIAL RATES UP

A charge of £2 a year for each vehicle using taxicab and carriers' stands is to be made by the Hastings Borough Council, according to a decision made at yesterday's meeting. Charges are to begin on July 1, and are payable in advance. Payment is to be made within 14 days and, failing payment in that period, the council has the right of cancelling the occupancy of the stands. It was stated that inquiries from other municipalities had revealed that in 22 towns 11 made a charge, or were taking the necessary steps to make a charge. The charges varied from 10/- to £3 for each vehicle. Consideration was given to the fees and charges of the council, and various amendments were made. The charge for dance halls seating decision made at vesterday's meet various amendments were made. The charge for dance halls seating 200 is to be increased from £1 to £2 a year, and for building permits, a minimum fee of 10/- is to be paid up to a value of £50.

An all-round increase was made in cemetery fees. The fee for the interment of a still-born child was increased from £1/2/6 to £1/5/-. The charge for week-day interments will

Price Of Motor Oil Rises

2½d A GALLON MORE

The Position In Hawke's Bay

The wholesale price of motor oils in Hawke's Bay has increased by 2½d. a gallon as from yesterday According to petrol distributors, the cost of several grades of industrial oils has advanced by 3½d. a gallon. This substantial rise in oil prices is only one of several advances which have taken place since the outbreak of war. It was learned to the outbreak of war. yesterday afternoon that the increase has not yet been considered by the petrol resellers in Hastings, but that they will be discussing the question in the near future when it will be decided whether or not the

will be decided whether or not the wholesale increase, or portion of it, will be passed on to the public.

The advance in the wholesale price, however, will prove a further burden on a number of sources, such as freezing companies, farmers and contractors, many of whom purchase their oil requirements direct from the wholesale ments direct from the wholesale distributors.

A GALLANT STAND

No one with any imagination can read the news of the gallant fight being put up by the Allies against the terrific German onslaught in France without a thrill of pride and gratitude to the brave men who are a living wall of defence between paganism and Christian civilisation. We are, at the moment, at a turning-point in human history. Just as, at a great railway terminus, the slight moving of the railpoints may determine whether the long train with its precious human load will go north or south in the long run, so at present the scales of Destiny are so evenly balanced that no one can prophesy with certainty on which side the weight will come down.

Courage and determination were never more needed than now. There need be no alarm about the general situation, which has in it many encouraging features which did not exist even a day or two ago. The welcome American decision to come to the aid of the Allies with war supplies is the greatest of these features, and that action alone has made it certain that the ultimate issue, while it may be deferred, will eventuate on the side of righteousness and fair dealing for all the peoples of the earth. Nothing is to be gained by minimising the gravity of the present situation, but neither is anything to be gained by minimising or by seeking to discredit in any way the devoted determination of the British people to see this thing through to the end.

What we need above everything else in this Dominion at the moment is a cool and calm acceptance of the indisputable fact that the British Commonwealth of Nations has mobilised the whole of its available resources in its fight for freedom. The root difference between Germany and her opponents is that while Germany is gambling everything on one desperate throw, those who are fighting her are planning and preparing for a long struggle. Never mind that bogey word "blitzkrieg" for the moment. There can be no lightning war when civilisation is at stake. All that men have striven for for centuries cannot be swept away in a few months or even in a few years. The doctrine of force will damn itself by the very impetuosity of its application.

Christian civilisation was not built in a day, nor can it be destroyed in a day. The material power of cruel and ingenious methods of killing people may succeed in annexing territory stained with the blood of its defenders, but the ultimate resistant power is in the souls of the people so attacked, and the moral force behind the defence of the decencies of human relationship is greater than the bestial lust for conquest based on bullying and blustering, and will prevail in the end.

With all the solemn emphasis at command it must be said that our bounden duty as faithful citizens of the Empire is to keep a stiff upper lip and to turn a deaf ear to all talk of defeatism. It will be insisted here until insistence is no longer necessary, that we should keep a sharp eye upon the enemy within the gates, and the greatest of these is the "carrier" (in the medical term) of bad news—the person who contaminates others with his fears because unwittingly, and by contact with an impure source, he has been so contaminated himself.

Look at the map of Europe to-day. Difficult and even desperate as the situation of the French nation is, it is shot through with the glory of a noble endeavour. There is something of which the Nazis know nothing in the magnificent morale of the troops who are still holding them up. The difference is that the defenders are standing between stark, materialistic brutality and their native land, their faith, all that they have ever been taught to revere. That difference will make all the difference between defeat and final victory.

An application for Nelson Park to be used for greyhound racing next summer was received from the Hastings Greyhound Racing Club at yesterday's meeting of the Hastings Borough Council. The council is to give the request its consideration. Although the Sports Club Patriotic Committee has been formed in Hastings only a comparatively short time it has been instrumental in raising £600 for the Sick and Wounded Appeal Fund, according to advice given by the secretary (Mr L Stickland) J. Stickland).

The Point of View

There was only one part of a newspaper which did not reflect the point of view of the writer, said a speaker at a public debate in Na pier last night. That was the lis of engagement notices, for in that case the young man had obviously lost his point of view altogether.

National Reserve

According to advice received in Napier, the registration rolls for the national military reserve, Class (returned soldiers) are to be re opened so that they may be brought up to full strength. It is understood that as a result of medical examina-tion the ranks of the reserve have been somewhat depleted, many having failed to come up to standard.

Increase in Gambling

Grave concern at the alarming increase in gambling and the gambling spirit was expressed at the monthly meeting of the Napier Ministers' Association. The decision of the Government to extend the provisions of the Gaming Act to permit the conduct of raffles had made this tendency more noticeable it was said. It was decided to urge the people to assist patriotic funds by direct and sacrificial giving.

Judge Selected

Mr E. Price, Dunedin, has been selected by the New Zealand National Coursing Association to act as judge for the New Zealand Centennial Cup Stake which is to be held at Longlands, Hastings, on June 25, 27 and 29. Mr Price, who is a brother of Mr H. J. Price, Hastings, is recognised as one of the leading coursing judges in Australia and coursing judges in Australia and New Zealand, naving been closely associated with the sport for the past 40 years. He is also a member of the National Coursing Council.

Highways Works

"The Highways Board is in the hands of the Government and everyone will agree that this is not the time for extra expenditure on highways," said Mr W. Morrison, a member of the board, speaking at the annual meeting of the No. 8 Highways District Council in Wanganui. "We have to keep our expenditure down to a maintenance Patriotic Fund have now been acknowledged by the National Patriotic Fund Board. Painful Accident

An 11-year-old boy, Spencer Dillon, son of Mr T. Dillon, manager of the Glenn Estate, Ohingaiti, met with a painful accident when a horse he was riding shied and the lad was dragged. One of his feet lad was dragged. One of his feet caught in a stirrup and after the mishap he lay on the roadside for some hours. The boy has to catch a bus which takes him to school, and he rides down to the main road to meet it. It was when he was riding home after leaving the bus in the evening that the accident happened. It was then dark and the pened. It was then dark, and the road was narrow and winding. He was found later by his father, who, alarmed at his not arriving home, set out to search for him. The boy was found to have suffered a broken leg, and he was taken to the hospital at Hunterville, where he is making good progress.

when the Speaker (the Hon. W. E. Barnard) called on Mr Hamilton to continue the Address-in-Reply debate, Mr Hamilton said that in lieu of making an Address-in-Reply speech he wished to make a statement on the recent negotiations between the Government and the Opposition.

The need of the moment was for quick acting and an all-in administration following up the recently passed all-in legislation.

Mr Hamilton then read a letter which he had received from the Prime Minister to-day stating that in addition to the representative War Council which the Government intended to appoint immediately, the Government proposed also to set up a War Cabinet and would be pleased if the Opposition would accept the invitation to appoint two members.

He regretted that the statement by Mr Hamilton cut across so abruptly the negotiations that had been in progress.

Mr Hamilton: We think it wise to clear away confusion.

Mr Fraser continued that so far as the Government was concerned it was anxious all the time to explore the possibilities of united action, but there was no hope of the edocoment of the Address-in-Reply, the Hon. The Opposition members of the War Cabinet would be members of the Executive Council without portfolio. The War Cabinet's responsibility would be to consider and determine all matters relating to the Second New Zealand Expeditionary Force, naval and air forces and home defence. The remaining duties and functions of the Government would be carried out by the present Cabinet in the usual way.

In the event of a War Cabinet being established, the functions of the War Council would necessarily be consultative and advisory.

"Trifling"

"Trifling"

This proposal, said Mr Hamilton, had been considered by the caucus of the Opposition and, in its opinion, the latest proposal of the Government was simply trifling with an important question at the very moment of the Empire's darkest hour. The complicated nature of this latest proposal, said Mr Hamilton, in no way met the situation. It failed to give the country the leadership it needed and he was certain that nothing less than an all-in, quick-acting and non-party Cabinet, with full administrative powers, would satisfy the people of New Zealand.

Mr Lee's View.

Mr J. A. Lee (Grey Lynn) said that it seemed to him that the Cabinet had been steering in the direction of an unofficial coalition, and he could not imagine that the Government would be more efficient with a War Cabinet or a War Council. He entered a plea for reason and said that there was a danger of a dogmatic attitude being adopted in such matters. Suppression was not leadership.

Zealand.

He pointed out that under the proposal the Opposition members of the War Cabinet would not have the right to attend Cabinet meetings, and it was equally half-hearted in regard to the powers with which it suggested that the War Cabinet should be vested.

should be vested.

It merely dealt with matters relating to the Second New Zealand Expeditionary Force, naval and air forces and home defence. This was but a very small part of what is represented by New Zealand's war respectively.

He was certain that the Government's proposal would be cumbersome and unworkable. The Opposition was determined to stand a hundred per cent. behind New Zealand's war effort, and the moment the Government was prepared to give of vernment was prepared to give effect to a non-party Cabinet with full Ministerial responsibility and power, it would be ready and willing to nominate its members.

All would be sorry, said Mr Hamil-

As far as the Address-in-Reply debate was concerned, he said, the Opposition would allow it to pass by default.

Mr Fraser's Reply

"I can only share the regret which, I am sure, will be shared by every earnest person in the Dominion who is really sincere to unite the country, at the tone of the rejection of the Government's proposals by the Leader of the Opposition," said Mr Fraser. "I do not think, during the period I have been in Parliament, that I ever before heard a statement that in almost every line breathes arrogance."

During the present financial year, close on £6,000,000 would be spent, so that by March, 1941, the total would be about £11,465,000.

Mr Jones also discussed what had been done to train and equip New Zealand's army. New Zealand was playing a great part in the war, and when its history was written, New Zealand would have nothing of which to be ashamed.

Mr A. F. Moncur (Rotorua) briefly replied and the motion to send a loyal address to the Governorwhich, I am sure, will be shared by every earnest person in the Dominion who is really sincere to unite the country, at the tone of the rejection of the Government's proposals by the Leader of the Opposition," said Mr Fraser. "I do not think, during the period I have been in Parliament, that I ever before heard a statement that in almost every line breathes arrogance."

Up to the present moment, continued Mr Fraser, the overtures that had taken place had been conducted in a friendly way, not in a dictatorial way. That was not the way to bring about national unity, and when the hon. gentleman presumed to talk to the people he was forgetting himself and overstepping the authority he had received from a minority of the people.

However, it was an important r inority, and the Government had endeavoured to give it consideration. He proposed to confine himself endeavoured to give it consideration.

"A Shock"

Mr Fra proceeded to examine Mr Hamilton's statement in detail. Throughout the negotiations Mr Hamilton had acted in a friendly manner, but the statement he had just received had given him a shock and was entirely contrary to that and was entirely contrary to that spirit. He quite agreed there were many important matters connected with the war effort that were not

NINE MONTHS LOST Ministry Of Supply's Work

United Press Association—Copyright. (Received June 13, 12.45 p.m.) LONDON, June 12.

The Minister of Supply (Mr Herbert Morrison), in a speech to-day, said that the nation had swung said that the nation had swung almost instantaneously from something which was too like a peace stroke to a full war stroke. There had been marked increases in output, of which some were dramatic.

"I have this week brought 1463 works under control," said the Minister. "We are steadily and swiftly reducing unessential production."

"Do not over-estimate the effect of this spurt," he said. "Do not belittle it, but do not expect the impossible of it."

Dealing with the events which led Dealing with the events which led up to the situation disclosed after the withdrawal from Flanders, Mr Morrison said that British military policy had been founded on the belief that a great war could be fought with a great navy and air force and a small continental army. The whole industrial planning until comparatively lately had been based on this conception. conception.

Cardinal Error

Even when the cardinal error of this view had been perceived, the planning was not sufficiently bold and the limits of thinking were too narrow. But, not only the years before the war was partially lost, but the first months of the war itself, had not been turned to full account. For nine months after the outbreak of the war the nation was in many of the war, the nation was in many, perhaps most, walks of like on a peace rather than a war basis. "This situation cannot be corrected at once," said the Minister.

Referring to the enormous programme of factory construction, he said that work was concentrated on those nearest completion, and the drive to bring over to arms produc-tion factories previously engaged on other work was quickening in pace. Mr Morrison said that all avail-able energy was being concentrated on the most urgent task. "The needs of war mean that to-day many short term measures are long term wis

Lively Debate Held At Napier

VISITING AUSTRALIANS

The merits and demerits of the Press were well ventilated at a public debate held in Napier last night. Of the visiting Australian team Mr D. Campbell was unable to take part on account of indisposition, but Mr A. M. Jenkins, Sydney, was present, and obviously pleased the audience with his speeches.

The proposition was "That the efforts of the Press to control public opinion menace democracy." Although the affirmative had some hard things to say in their condemnation of the Press, the audience apparently thought otherwise, for the motion was lost by a large majority.

Two Napier men, Messrs H. R. Moss and H. W. Youren, took the affirmative, and Mr H. W. Dowling supported Mr Jenkins for the negative. Mr John Mason presided over a large attendance.

Opening the debate for the affirmative Mr H. R. Moss contended that the power of the Press in consensationalism that the power of the Press in controlling public opinion was real and extensive, and for that reason was the more serious.

In a democratic state it was the duty of the elected representatives of the people to hold the balance of the records as a sport and "human interest." duty of the elected representatives of the people to hold the balance fairly between the various sections of the community.

In spite of the influence of radio the Press was still the most power-ful instrument in forming public opinion. The written word always carried more weight than the spoken word, and was remembered longer. In considering the question they should remember that while the New Zealand newspapers carried a certain amount of weight, overseas publications with huge circulations had a hundred times more influence.

Mr Youren instanced the discustance in the solution of the solution of the work of the funds.

All were which will be sold at the ball. The receipts from this source should prove a good way of helping to swell the funds. These papers generally adopted a militant tone, and were full of journalistic kick, bite and gouge. Their sole aim was to make profits, and where their business was concerned had no regard for the common

Promotes Strife

The Press, he continued, sets nation against nation, people against arguments for the affirmative were people, and class against class. It was separating the people into different sections, promoting strife, and making sure that there was no armistice.

Where there was any trouble, the Press was there pouring oil on the flames, and when there was no trouble the Press very often manufactured some. There was a sinister shadow behind the Press—that was the advertiser, who was always. was the advertiser, who was always

Even in this Dominion there were newspapers that were always parti-san, and had no concern for the good of the community as a whole. They harped on one note and never presented arguments on the other side.

It was more than a menace. The whole democratic structure was being weakened and as long as the Press continued to fan the flames of dissension the menace would re-

The speaker said that his criticism was not intended to be destructive, but was aimed as assisting the demo-gered at the present time.

Points of View

Opening for the negative Mr Jenkins considered that the previous speaker had made a great fuss about what was after all a very commonplace matter. One could not write anything with the present time.

If the newspapers were conservative that was because society was conservative. The newspapers were merely the voice of society, and if there were anything wrong with the press it must also be wrong with society.

Alace matter. One could not write anything without taking one point of view or another, and the Press could hardly be blamed for the attitude it took.

The speaker instanced himself, saying that he had always taken the Labour viewpoint. He had always taken that the reason Standard III children were taught the details of battles or wars of previous ages was to keep their mind off "the class struggle."

Replying on behalf of the affirmative, Mr Moss held that everyone had a right to make up his own mind on any subject without being subjected to undue influence. He considered that the whole ambition of the Press was to to create discord and that the proposition must be considered correct.

On being put to the vote the negative won by a fair majority. The speakers were accorded a vote of thanks by acclamation.

The speaker referred to "drivelling inanities" and other descriptions of the views to be found in newspapers, but admitted that he had not had time to study the New Zealand publications, and his remarks con-cerned mainly those of Australia. The viewpoint of the reader had to be considered as well as that of the writer. Editorial opinions were futile, because one only read opin ions one agreed with. Mixed Cargo

Mixed Cargo

Mr Jenkins drew a dramatic picture of a railway carriage in which an assortment of travellers were reading their daily newspapers. While the speaker perused the "Labour Daily," a "bloated capitalist" opposite him studied the "Sydney Morning Herald," and snorted because the miners were claiming an extra 3d a day.

Dying By Inches

Mr Youren appealed to his listeners to turn their thoughts from such fantasies as the "bloated capitalist" and seriously to consider the problem of democracy, which was dying by inches. Some might say that it was deservedly dying.

For democracy to succeed, the general public must be well enlightened. And their principal source of enlightenment was the Press, which therefore had a great responsibility to discharge. ENDING TO-MORROW

Although their means are slender, at least some old-age pensioners are making their full sacrifice in the war effort by contributing to patriotic appeals. To these people a contribution of a few shillings is as big a sacrifice as a cheque for £50 or more would be to some people.

Yesterday an elderly man walked into the joint appeal depot in the Commerce Buildings, Hastings, and expressed the desire of his wife and himself to donate 5/- a month from their pension. "It's not very much, but I expect every little bit helps," he commented as he handed across the first instalment to the treasurer, Mr W. H. Maitland. This generous Mr W. H. Maitland. This generous action prompted Mr Maitland to tell a reporter of another pensioner who had contributed £1 out of his monthly pension of about £6.

A storekeeper in one of the residential areas of Hastings, whose telephone is used a good deal by purchasers, hit on the happy idea of placing an authorised collection box near the Seconding for the negative, Mr H. W. Dowling expressed the opinion that the audience must have long since been convinced that the telephone. As a result persons using the telephone have contributed 18/8

Another instance of generous contributions though small was brought to the notice of the Press yesterday when a member of the joint appeal committee showed a letter received by the committee from Mr Ralph Paynter in which he enclosed £3 12/2, representing a donation of one day's pay by all members of the Grassmere orchard staff. "Donations of this kind are much appreciated, and it is hoped that it will prove an incentive to other workers to do the same," commented the committeeman.

Changes in the air services between New Zealand and England caused by the Italian entry into the war are explained in a statement by Mr W. Hudson Fysh, managing director of Quantas Empire Airways, brought to New Zealand by Mr Noewll D. Jones, traffic superintendent for the

The Bout Described Katan held the advantage throughout the first round, but it was obvious from the start that he had no poor opponent in Corbett. A few illegalities such as heavy slap-

Further nose-pulling by Katan, together with ungentle facial massage and hair-pulling, enraged Corbett in the second round. Katan spent over a minute trying to pin Corbett's shoulders with a wristlock, but Cor-Corbett's raltar: bett escaped, to apply a semi-cruci-fix. They were in this hold at the

With a well-applied arm-stretch Corbett caused Katan a good deal of trouble early in the fourth round, but Katan escaped by administering a swift kick to the face. Flying tackles by both wrestlers, with an admixture of elbow jolts, culminated in Corbett going through the ropes for the count of 11. INFLUENZA SIGNS

Dunmanway And Nora Gregor Amiss

A sudden attack of a form of in-fluenza has necessitated allowing Nora Gregor to forgo her engagement at Hastings to-morrow and Dunmanway, who is temporarily quartered in S. J. Reid's stables, also contracted the malady, which has afflicted both horses in the throat. Both are receiving veterinary attention, but so little improvement is noticed to date in the condition of Dunmanway that his chances of contesting the Rotopai Hack Handicap to-morrow appear extremely remote.

It is remarkable that the malady has stricken these particular horses. Both were never in better health than when they raced on Saturday; Nora Gregor ran her best race this season, and Dunmanway was most impressive in his success in the Winimpressive in his success in the win-ter Hack Handicap, scoring like a really good class horse. Both did well over the week-end, but on Tues-day it was necessary to call upon the services of a veterinary surgeon. It would seem that influenza, as in humans, strikes most suddenly the umans, strikes most suddenly the

HAWKE'S BAY HUNT MEETING

Programme Framed For July 6

The Hawke's Bay Hunt Club's annual race meeting at Hastings is only three weeks off and interest now quickens in the programme framed for this popular meeting.

The Harold Russell Memorial Challenge Cup Steeplechase is the main event, this race, carrying a stake of £130 and a 5gns. miniature cup, with the £75 challenge cup to stake of £130 and a 5gns. miniature cup, with the £75 challenge cup to be held for twelve months. This race is for qualified hunters as is the Soutra Hunters' Flat, 1½ miles, for amateur riders.

A hack and hunters' hurdles race, a maiden race, a hack ten furlong event, a hack sprint and an open sprint complete a comprehensive programme.

It should not be overlooked that ominations for all events close with he secretary on June 24.
